DR. DE GOURGUE'S PATENT SPECIFIC.

THIS medicine has been used with great success as thousands can testify. In all rheumatic affections whether acute or chronic, its decided superiority by affording almost immediate relief has been successfully tested. For the following complaints it will be found very efficacious, viz: Quinced sore throat, Hives in children, Pain in the back and Sciatica, Bruises and Sprains, Chapped hands, violent contusions, Fresh wounds, Burns and Scalds, Head and Tooth ache, Debility of the system. Prevents the eye from turning black if immediately applied; is excellent for washing the teeth and gums, &c. &c. The specific has been administered with surprising success, in cases of flatulency, pain in the stomach, bowels, dysentery, &c.

The most inveterate Piles has been thoroughly cured by it. A Fistula, which in most cases proves fatal, yielded to the specific. The above medicine is held in such high estimation by many families that they are unwilling to be without it a moment.

Prepared and sold until further notice, ONLY at the south east corner of the Bowery and 8th street, 2d corner above Vauxhall Garden.

The extensive demand manifested for the genuine De Gourgue's Specific, has induced several to endeavor to deceive the public by persuading them to purchase a counterfeit medicine. No person except the proprietor in the city of New York is authorised to vend De Gourgue's Specific, and it can be obtained at no other place than the above, where it is prepared, and which may be known by the sign over the door. Each bottle is accompanied with printed directions, sealed with the initials D. G. on the cork, NONE OTHER IS GENUINE. Retail price 50 cents per bottle; wholesale $4 50 per dozen.

Directions.—Shake the bottle and apply the Specific with friction to the afflicted parts. In fevers rub well the small of the back. For Hives in children apply it freely to the chest. For Convulsions by rubbing the back and stomach, its effects are almost instantaneous. For the Headache apply it to the back of the neck and soles of the feet. For chilblains or frosted feet, rub them twice a day, or oftener. From 20 drops to a tea-spoon full may be taken inwardly, mixed with water.

A selection of certificates from numerous respectable individuals is annexed, to give the public some idea of the value of the above medicine.

This is to certify that I have used "De Gourgue's Specific," and the most beneficial result has been the consequence. For the last twenty years I have been afflicted with the rheumatism, and suffered to that degree, that I never went without a cane or a strengthening plaster. By bathing with the Specific the pain is removed. I can walk without a cane, and have no occasion for a strengthening plaster; the great relief I have obtained, I attribute under providence to the Specific. It gives me great satisfaction, therefore, to recommend it to my fellow citizens.

Signed THOMAS CRUMDWELL, 369 Bowery.
New York, 2d February, 1832.

This is to certify that I have used "De Gourgue's Specific," to my entire satisfaction, and I do not hesitate to give my unqualified approbation in favor of the same. By the use of less than one oz., in three weeks time, my hand, which was badly torn to pieces with the loss of one finger, by the accidental discharge of a gun, was completely healed. I have also known others to use it with like success.

Signed EDWARD CONLEY, Blackwell's Island.
New York, July 3, 1830.

I have been in the habit of using "De Gourgue's Specific" for several years, and do not hesitate to give it the highest recommendation, having used it most plentifully and always found the greatest benefit from it.

Signed JOSEPH GANOUNG, 59 Carmine street.
New York, 12th Dec. 1831.

I certify, that having made use of "De Gourgue's Patent Specific" for myself and family, occasionally for more than two years,—I do not hesitate to recommend it to my friends for the cure of every complaint, and more than are named in the directions accompanying each phial.

WM. D. DISBROW,
New York, Aug. 2, 1830. Bowery, near Fifth st.

I have great satisfaction in recommending "De Gourgue's Patent Specific," considering it a very valuable medicine, having been in the habit of using it for the last three years. In a severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism, which deprived me of the use of my limbs, so much so that I could not put my foot to the floor or raise my arms,—I was induced to try the Specific, and was so much relieved that the next day I was enabled to walk freely, and speedily recovered, from the use of one bottle. I have also used it with the greatest efficacy for burns, bruises, wounds, &c in my family.

ELIZA BROOKS,
Jan. 22, 1832. Corner 1st Avenue and 10th st.

I was badly afflicted with a violent and continual pain in my breast, for about nine years, the last two or three years it was extremely bad. I had consulted five or six different physicians, and tried various remedies. Every thing, however, failed to give me relief, until I fortunately used "De Gourgue's Specific," which, I am happy to state, perfectly cured me in a short time. I keep the medicine constantly in my family, and use it for various purposes, and recommend it highly to all families.

Sports of the Turf.

BALTIMORE RACES.
CENTRAL COURSE.

The second Spring Meeting commenced on Tuesday the 18th June,—the attendance was not numerous, nor were the sports of a very first rate order.

FIRST DAY.

Purse $300—Two mile heats,—$15 entrance.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Mr. Hammond's b. h. Reform, | 1 | 5 | 1 |
| Mr. Boyce's ch. c. Columbus, | 2 | 4 | 2 |
| Dr. Duvall's ch. m. Fioretta, | 1 | 3 | dr. |
| J. S. Garrison's ch. c. Orange Boy, | 5 | 1 | dis. |
| J. M. Selden's b. c. Sir Whitefoot, | 3 | 2 | dis. |
| Jno M. Botts' ch. h. Rapid, | dist. | | |

Time—3 53—3 53—3 57.

Dr. Duvall's Fioretta, won the first heat,—closely followed by Columbus. Orange Boy, who it is supposed could have taken any heat in the race, lay by to the 2d, and dropt in, just to save his distance. The second heat Orange Boy won easily, but in the third, his rider mistook the distance, as he was not contending for the heat, and he was thus thrown out, and Orange Boy lost the race which all supposed he would have won cleverly from his known bottom. Reform took the purse, the balance of the field being distanced or ruled out.

FISHING ON SKATES.

Kaskaskia, Randolph Co. Il. March 27, 1833.

Mr. Editor—Seeing an invitation in your useful and very interesting Magazine, to us of the "far west," to give your eastern readers an account of some of our amusements, I avail myself of it, and send you the following; novel in itself, and I believe peculiar to this region. It is no other than catching fish by running them down! We have all heard of running down foxes, wolves, and other wild animals; but few, I believe, have ever thought that the finny tenants of the flood can be taken in the same manner. But they are frequently, and in great quantities; and the sport is as lively and exhilarating as can well be imagined.

The citizens of Galena often amuse themselves in this way on Fever river, on which that town is situated. The water of that stream is very clear and the ice there, (N. lat. 42° 25',) forms in one night, two or three inches thick, as pure as the chrystal itself. Through it, the fish can be seen to the depth of eight feet or more, and at a distance of ten or fifteen feet. Those who are fond of the sport, prepare their skates, equipped with a gig* and a tomahawk, and each man looks out for his game. Having discovered a pike, muskolunge, or sturgeon he gives chace, and watching the motions of his game, he can, upon his skates, adopt his own movements to them; and in a pursuit of sometimes less than three hundred yards, performing various evolutions, the fish becoming exhausted with fear, and his exertions to escape, stops. The sportsman then, with his tomahawk, blocks out about six inches square of the ice, and with his gig, brings his prey to air, pierced by its prongs. What is remarkable, is while the ice is cutting the fish show no symptoms of alarm, nor do they attempt a further escape.

Thus are two of the most delightful amusements combined, skating and fishing. It is only however, for one or two days in a season, that this sport can be enjoyed, for after the first freezing the ice loses its transparency, so that the fish cannot be discovered through it, its surface no longer resembling that of the polished mirror.

The kinds of fish taken in this way, are the common pike, weighing from half a pound to three pounds, the muskolunge of about the same size, both very delicious, and an inferior kind of sturgeon. A Mr. J. J. C. merchant of this place, was one of a skating party of four on Fever river, who ran down and captured in one day, almost four hundred fine fish, of the description mentioned above. Fishing on skates is a novelty I doubt not, to most of your readers, but in the west, it is often enjoyed, and you are assured, that it wants no one ingredient of "right excellent sport," though my description of it is tame and frigid.

While writing, I may as well tell you of another mode the inhabitants of that comparatively cold region have of taking fish. In warm sunshining days the fish rise up to the surface, probably to catch a look, or to feel the vivifying influences, of the splendid luminary through their brilliant covering. Their back fins, particularly those of the sunfish, freeze to the ice, and the fisherman cut out a piece of it, say five feet wide and ten feet long, and with a rope, slipped over one end, they upset the cake of ice, to which vast numbers of fish are found adhering by the back fins. Sleigh loads of them are taken after this fashion; and though inanimate, if put in tepid water they soon revive. This is a cheap and easy way of getting a supply of fish, but it wants the life and exhilaration of the other—running them down on skates. SHAWA.

* A spear with three barbed prongs.

DREAD OF HYDROPHOBIA.

The late celebrated Dr. James relates the following story, as a convincing proof of the wonderful sagacity of the dog, as manifesting his terror and dread of hydrophobia:—

A man, who used to come every day to the Doctor's house, was so beloved by three cocker spaniels which he kept, that they never failed to jump into his lap, and caress him the whole time he staid. It happened that this man was bitten by a mad dog, and the very first night he came under the influence of the distemper, they all ran away from him to the very top of the garret stairs, barking and howling, and showing all the other signs of distress and consternation.—The man was cured, but the dogs were not reconciled to him for three years afterwards.—Skinner's Magazine.

"Half Horse and Half Man Race."—The late Sandusky Clarion gives an account of a race of seven and a half miles on a smooth turnpike road, between a pedestrian and a gentleman with a horse and sulky for a purse of $100. The pedestrian was to have 20 minutes the advantage in time, but won the race without apparent fatigue with 15 minutes to spare.—Ferdinand Courier.

A short time since, a bear was captured in a trap and killed by Messrs. D. and R. Morris, of P[illegible] township in this county, which weighed nearly four hundred pounds. The monster was recognized as an old offender having levied his tythes, in shape of pigs, sheep, &c. for many years, but always managing to avoid a close contest with the legitimate owners thereof. His skin when taken off was very large, and the hair on it was of a most beautiful shining black.—Muncy Argus.

The editor of "We the People," has put forth an ingenious dissertation on the comforts of ugliness. One of his "comforts" is founded on the fragility of beauty—the argument seems to be, that elegance and beauty are flowers that quickly fade, while ugliness endures forever. This is immortality with a vengeance.

A clergyman recently died in England, supposed to be poor—but on examining his effects, hard cash to the amount of over $200,000 was found.

A most shocking murder was committed on New Brunswick, (N. J.) a few days since. We learn that the provocation to the deed was the success of the deceased in an "affair of the heart."

THE MOTHER OF THE WOLVES.

Between four and five leagues from Honfleur, on the Caen road, is the town of Pont L'Eveque. It is a long straggling place, stretching half a league across the valley of the Touque, and for quiet dulness may fairly rival any little town even in France, where provincial towns are, Heaven knows, dull enough; but its situation is most beautiful. Above and below it the valley lies open to a great breadth, bordered on either side by tall and gently sloping hills, whose sides are covered with apple orchards, and rich in verdure, unsurpassed by Devonshire itself. The Touque, a trout stream of the largest class, ripples along the meadows, sometimes in a single channel, sometimes divided into many branches, or bending toward the hill-foot to meet some tributary, but always clear and rapid—the very beau ideal of a trout stream, and well stocked with a speckled population, which by this time has had some personal experience in the mystery of the artificial fly.

The scene of the story we are about to relate is a fishing hamlet, situated where the river, passing between two high and abrupt ridges of cliff, scarce a quarter of a mile apart, empties itself into the sea. The cabins are built a little on the slope, to be beyond the reach of the spring-tides, which, when aided by a north-west gale, flow up the valley the whole two leagues to Pont L'Eveque, often rising three feet high in the street of that town.—The second or third of these cabins on the bridle road from Beaumont was tenanted in our time, and perhaps is still, by an elderly dame, La Mere Therese, or, as in memory of her adventure, she is far more generally styled La Mere aux Loups. Her husband had been a fisherman, and one gusty night his little bark was thrown on the shore, and he perished in the waves within sight of his own home.—Therese was not rich enough for the luxury of grief; she was obliged to labor for her daily pittance, and to labour hard withal; for her neighbours were all too poor to assist her, and Monsieur le Baron had more taste for Paris than for his chateau on the bleak cliff top.

One summer evening she had gone into the forest which spread for many miles through the country, there to collect sticks for her little fire. On this occasion she strayed rather beyond her usual limits into a very lonely spot; here, to her great surprise, she saw, in a sheltered nook, what she conceived to be a litter of young puppies. Wondering what had induced their mother to abandon them, as their continual squeals for food persuaded her was the case, Therese, with the kindness which so constantly prevails in hearts softened by misfortune, resolved on saving the poor little wretches from famine. She cast away her sticks, the produce of a long gleaning, to make room for the petits malheureux, and, nestling them in her warm woollen petticoat, toddled home as quick as her legs would carry her. She cleared the wood without let or hindrance; but at the very instant when she lifted the latch of her chaumiere, a fierce howl rang on her ear; she rushed in, and providentially slapped the door behind her. The enraged brute tore at its fastenings, shaking them so furiously, that poor Therese fled in dismay up the few steps which led to the garret, if we may dignify a hole under the thatch with so grandiloquent a name! Well was it for her that another door guarded its entrance. Her assailant, a gaunt she-wolf, the mama of the nice little pups, finding the attack on the door unattended with success, made a leap at the casement, and alighted inside, bearing with her the shattered frame and glass; then flew at the crazy door on the steps; she tore at it with tooth and claw, till the very mud walls of the cabin trembled. Meanwhile Therese thrust her head through the window of her garret, and with exemplary foresight screamed "au feu! au feu!"—an expedient which in similar circumstances cannot be too strongly recommended: for the cry of "murder!" is sometimes apt to induce such personal considerations as might possibly retard succor, while that of "fire!" only reminds us of a really very pretty sight. As at the sound of the dread tocsin the inhabitants of Touque assembled at her cries, but no fire was to be seen. "Look through the window and you'll see the flames!" said she; and they did look!—the fire of Vesuvius could not have sent them more rapidly to the right about than that they saw. In the twinkling of an eye every man, woman, and child had vanished, leaving the unfortunate Therese with a worm-eaten plank between her and the jaws of the wolf; but shame and humanity would not suffer them to desert her thus. The men armed themselves with sticks, and staves, and pitchforks; but their main reliance was a couple of venerable firelocks, to all appearance more perilous to their owners than to their mark. These were placed in the hands of the two best marksmen of the hamlet—a title which till then had never been conceded to them by their rivals in gunnery; they advanced upon the enemy, supported by the stickmen, mentally levelled their pieces and fired—but it was one of them, for the other's piece most unaccountably flashed in the pan. The wolf was wounded, though not mortally, and in any other animal it would have grieved one to mark that she never even wasted a look on her slayers, but tore and raved at the door, heedless of all save her young!—Pitying a wolf, is however, utterly out of the question. The serviceable piece was reloaded, the butt of the other hammered, and pins thrust into the touch-hole; again the pieces were raised, and this time both poured in their volley with such effect that the brute fell, and was speedily finished by the main guard, who were resolved that their chieftain should not be altogether neglected in the strife.—Therese, half dead with fright, delivered her young dam protégés to the strong arm of the law, and they were executed on the spot, according to the decision of a drumhead court martial. This circumstance occurred some years ago; since then wolves have been only once seen in the vicinity of Pont L'Eveque.

TROLLOPIANA.

The Philadelphia Gazette tells its readers that a letter has lately been received by somebody, from the renowned Mrs. Trollope, in which among other important matters that exquisite lady begs leave to offer a few words by way of apology for the sharp words she has bestowed upon us Republicans and our doings; her plea is necessity: having as she says "a husband and eight children to feed and provide for." The excuse is a good one, and fully justifies our benevolent friend in writing not merely two, but two hundred books; as for the style in which her performances are accomplished, the event affords the best justification that could be devised, and we rejoice to believe that the good lady's books have placed her upon good terms with her baker and butcher. That this is the fact we are well assured from the number of imitators whom the success of her books has brought into the teeming garden of English literature—or rather into that particular patch of it, whereunto the tribe of American travellers claim the right of fee-simple.

We are not able to state the exact number of tourists who have skipped through the States with note-book in hand, and then hurried back to superintend the passage of their lucubrations through the prolific press of the great metropolis, since the appearance of her clever "Domestic Manners;" but we know of four new works, of which one has been recently re-published in this country, and the other three are announced. Mr Stuart's book was brought out about three weeks ago and has, we believe, been extensively read; it is fair and impartial, and full of excellent information; the writer cannot be classed among the disciples of the Trollopian school. A Captain Alexander of the Royal Engineers very recently put forth a couple of volumes which he calls "Trans-Atlantic Sketches;" one of them is devoted to South America and the other to the United States and Canada. They are vigorous, lively and graphic, and so far as our own knowledge enables us to pronounce upon them, authentic and accurate. The gallant Captain seems to have come among us with a good-humored disposition to see what was to be seen; to give credit for what was deserving of it, and to laugh when occasion presented itself; he shows us up now and then, but it is in good style, and we have no doubt that he is a capital fellow, with a pair of keen eyes, and a good deal of talent. Mrs. Trollope cannot we fear, lay any claim to him as one of her followers—Of Major Hamilton's book we can say nothing, not having seen a copy; it is now we believe in press, and we are told that it cuts us up enormously. The last of the four which we have mentioned, is the production of a Reverend Gentleman whose lot it is to rejoice in the euphonous name of Isaac Fidler, and in several capital letters that come after it in his title page. This worthy divine, we are happy to say, is a genuine follower of the "old Lady;" and we can readily feel how proud she must be of him. He came to the United States, as he says, to preach and teach Sanscrit; and his principal motive was a dissatisfaction with the existing state of affairs in his own country; which means we presume that the Reverend Isaac was a bit of a Radical. This does very well to put in his book; but we feel assured that it is to our friend Mrs Trollope we are indebted for the honor of having among us for some odd weeks, the Reverend Isaac and Mrs. Fidler; he had read her book, and what is more, he had heard how much money she made by it; the sum total being we suspect, a larger number of pounds sterling than Mr. Fidler could hope to acquire by either of his established modes of gathering mammon. It was clear that the Old Lady had made a good speculation; and an irresistible impulse to go and do likewise sprang up in the heart of the teacher of Sanscrit. To this end he tarried among us a brief space; made a flying excursion to Canada; and then hastened back, impatient to drive a bargain with some popular publisher. We confess that we have been excessively amused with his book; more even than with his great predecessors, because it comes more home to our own business and bosoms, seeing that our own much belaboured city was almost exclusively the scene of his observations and comments. Truth to say, we have been somewhat astonished at some of the discoveries recorded in the learned gentleman's pages; we did not know for example that it was next to impossible to find any printer who would undertake to get out a Greek work in this country, or that our professors and best scholars would rank only amongst smatterers in England; but look you there, what a thing it is to live in this world where one may learn something new every day!

The Reverend Isaac Fidler's book will be published soon we are told, and our readers may promise themselves some entertainment; when it appears, we will take notice of it at some length.

THE WANDERING PIPER.

A sort of a controversy seems to be going on among the Boston Editors, or some of them, touching the character and performances of this erratic individual; one party maintaining his claims to attention, good treatment, and half pence; the other denouncing him as an impostor and vagrant. A correspondent of the Morning Post throws out a suggestion that looks rather ominous for the peripatetic. It seems that in 1787 an act was passed, designed for the suppression of rogues, vagabonds, and other idle and disorderly persons, such as common beggars, Pipers and Fiddlers. Within the provisions of this act, the Piper in question, it seems will fall, unless he obtains a license from the City Authorities; and the result will be a visit to the House of Correction.—One of our City papers had a long article on this subject one day this week, the purpose of which was to show the very great improbability of the story that has been told of the origin and design of the Piper's peregrinations; and the extreme likelihood that the whole affair is but an ingenious contrivance to raise the wind.—If so, the Piper has been blowing to some purpose, for his collections are said to be very considerable.

PHIL. M'GEE'S REASONS FOR EMIGRATION.
STREET DIALOGUE.

Scene the wharf, enter Daniel O'Toole a native, meeting Phil M'Gee, a "cousin garmin of his own." Just arrived from the sod.

Daniel O'Toole. (grasping Phil by the arm, as if he took it for the handle of a sledge hammer,) "Och then, Musha, every big bad luck to you Phil my darlin, but sure it is'nt yourself that's in it, at all, at all."

Phil M'Gee.—(returning the squeeze)—"Troth avic, an it is, at least all that's left of him after the voyage he had—but how!—what! why as I'm a sinner to Dan O'Toole or the divil. Arrah Dan mabouchal is it alive and kicking at all you are, and you all the way out of sweet Kilkullen these six years."

Don Toole.—"Indeed an it is then, and in regard of that same, it's just next modin I am like a piece of belly bacon. But Phil agrah what news from the sod—how is the sweet bridge of Kilkullen, and the sky over it?"

Phil.—(with a wink)—"Party well I thank you considering the times, barrin in regard of its having been swept away by a flood last Christmas."

Dan.—"Tare nages!—Phil do you tell me so, and mine, and Mary's names, and our day of sading, illegantly cut in copper-plate letters on the coping stone—but say aric, what has become of Pat Durfy, of the "Haggs gap?"

Phil.—"Not a great deal of good any way, inasmuch as he was hang'd last assizes, on a charge of the crowner's quest, and all for only caring a thief of a Peeler (Policeman) of the headache."

Dan.—"Troth, I was long of the notion, that gallows Pat would never be able to cheat Jack Ketch of his guinea—but what of his cousin, limping Mat Doogan, of the Mall?"

Phil.—"Is it Mat Doogan you mane? Faith joy, he was after dancing a jig to the same tune, only that being a tight lump of a boy, he took his Majesty's eye, and was accordingly sent on Government duty to Bottony Bay."

Dan.—"I suppose that's a ginteel way you have of saying he was transported."

Phil.—"Pon my sowkins no!—though to be sure, some ill grudging people used to say so, but thin did'nt Judy Costelo see him driving on a coach to Kingstown Harbor, with a guard of soldiers, and sure they would'nt be the fools to go to such expense about a common convart." (convict)

Dan.—"But what in the name of St. Dinnis druv you to Ameriky?"

Phil.—(A sigh preceeded the answer)—Faith nothing in the world but a bar of the ould song, rent, tithes, taxes, and an ill-looking thief of an absentee landlord, every sweet bad luck to him. So you see every thing going to the dogs, the King running away with this thing, the peelers running away with that, and the parson and tithe proctor taking all that was left—so sez Mary to me one morning—Phil, avic, sez she, we have nothing to the good now at all at all, and if we stay any longer, its likely we'll have much less, so in the name of God, what do think if we go to Ameriky. Never say it twice Alana sez I, for sure if we have nothing to lose the loss can't be very great any way, and then you know Dan, is one of the advantages a poor man has over his neighbors. Well, with that we trudged off for Liverpool, where we paid our passage money to a thief of an agent, that pack'd us down in the durty howld of a vessel as thick as herring in a tub, and so my dear, there we have been knocked and jolted about the broad say oshan ever since."

Dan.—"By that Phil you must have been lying too in a storm."

Phil.—"Storm did you say! heavens help you Dan, for an Omedhaune, why man a storm wasn't a whistle to it; didn't it blow a real lady-wind, (whirlwind) as the sailors call it every inch of the way, and wouldn't we all have been rackt, and murthered entirely, if it wasn't for the prayers of Jim Docherty, (more wind to him,) who ran over the litany and counted his beads quicker nor you, or I could play jack-stones. And so, as I was saying, between his praying, and the innocent childer's crying, the devil, it appears had no power over the ship, and here we are at last, safe and sound as whole skins, light hearts, empty pockets and hearty appetites can make us, all the glory be to Saint Patrick, and the blessings of Father O'Flanagan the parish priest of Kilkullen, heaven be his bed, who gave us a five pound note, and his benediction the day we set out on our thravels:—and between you and I Dan, it wasn't very much over-stocked he was with the conveniences at the same time. But come avic I'm as dry as an oven—is there ever a drop of Irish-owen in the neighborhood."

Dan.—"Not a spoonful, at least of a christian like quality, but if you come into McGowran's at the corner, I'll trate you to as good a horn of Jamaica as ever wetted an Alderman's whistle."

Here the cousins adjourned to a neighboring tap, while we proceeded to our garret to record the history of Phil Magee's first introduction to his friends in America.

INTERESTING ANECDOTES OF THE HORSE AND DOG.

A correspondent from Cumberland C. H. Virginia has sent us the following anecdotes of those noble animals the Horse and the Dog:—he states them on the authority of an Uncle of his to whom the animals belonged, and who was an eye witness of what is here related. Speaking of his much respected and cherished relative, he says "Some years ago he had a favorite brood Mare, at once the most mischievous and sagacious of quadrupeds. She was grazing one day in company with another Mare who it appears, was tired of the herbage on her own pasture and cast a longing eye, as the Sex will sometimes do, on the luxuriant growth of an adjoining neighbors land. Being unable to open the gate, she tried to attract the notice of her fellow grazer, and then walked again towards the gate. Failing however to tempt her from her feeding that time, she once more approached and lured her to the gate, as if conscious that she was able to assist her in getting through. My Uncle assures me that his Mare, leisurely walked to the Gate, raised the latch with her teeth, and after holding the gate open till her companion had passed, very quietly resumed her interrupted meal.

"This was done in the sight and presence of the old Gentleman, who further states that it was her custom to go to the Corn house and if the key was in the door, turn it with her teeth, open the door and very composedly help herself."

"The anecdote of the Dog is so strange that I should hesitate to send it were I not so well satisfied of its truth. To my mind it is one of the strongest proofs I ever heard of the capacity of the Dog to judge the feelings of Man by his outward signs."—Our kind correspondent need not fear the scepticism of any one acquainted with the almost intellectual sagacity of the Dog, for hundreds of instances are recorded of their refusal to approach even their greatest favorites when disease or death had set its mark upon their features,—the anecdote continues thus,

"My Uncle had been confined for some months with severe rheumatism, and for a week or two his life was despaired of. During the whole of this time a favorite hound came into his room every morning and looked earnestly into his face. Noticing this attention of his Dog, the old gentleman endeavored to get him to his bed side, not only by kind expressions but by every species of coaxing, and even the offering of wanted food—but it was in vain,—as long as he continued ill, the Dog invariably shrunk from all his caresses, and ran away out of the house. One morning however, he came to the door as usual, and the moment he saw his master's face, he sprang upon the bed, and licked and fondled him with every demonstration of attachment and delight. Two friends of my uncle were in the room at the time who had marked the behavior of the Dog on this and former occasions, and the old gentleman addressing them said—'Friends, I feel assured I shall soon be well. A great change has taken place in my symptoms during the night, and the instinct of this faithful creature confirms my hope that I shall soon again be with you well and sound.'—and very shortly his words were verified.

These, Messrs. Editors, are what I consider very near approaches to reason,—and should you think them worthy of insertion, I shall be much gratified at having add my mite to so interesting and valuable a paper as I consider yours. And let me hope that the truth of what I relate will partially atone for the rough manner in which it is told, for I am yet unskilled to couple words or frame smooth sentences. Yours most respectfully, G. B. G.

NOTE.—We shall always be happy to hear from our friendly correspondent, whose interesting matter would amply compensate for much rudeness of manner, which in fact, is only to be found in his diffident opinion of his own powers.

LONDON POLICE.

Two respectable young men, who are in an eminent merchant's office, appeared before the Lord Mayor, the one to complain against the other for an assault.

The complainant stated that in consequence of some words which he and the defendant had, the defendant struck him.

The Lord Mayor—What, without provocation?

Complainant—Without immediate provocation, my Lord.

The Lord Mayor—Well, tell me what sort of provocation it was, whether immediate or remote.

Complainant—There were words between us on the subject of the bill in Parliament of Sir somebody Agnew, on the better observance of the Sabbath (A laugh.)

The Lord Mayor—A very odd subject to come to blows about! However, as it was upon such a subject you quarrelled, I am sure the religious feelings of both will impress upon you the necessity of going no further with the matter.

Defendant—The fact is, my Lord, he taunted me with want of spirit because I did not resent his impious phraseology at the moment.

The Lord Mayor—And you to prove you were a man of courage, gave him a thump on the head. (Laughter.)

Defendant—Exactly, my Lord. The reason I did not strike him the instant he offended me, was that our principals were in the next office, and of course I did not wish to let them know any thing about our dispute.

The Lord Mayor—But how could you fall out upon such a question? The very name of any thing that had a connexion with religion ought, at this time of day, to have prevented any feeling of animosity.

Defendant—He first called me a blackguard.

Complainant—I never thought you one, nor said so. I only said it was the act of a blackguard for you to strip off your coat in the street and offer to fight, and I think so still.

Defendant—My Lord, he was not satisfied with saying that, but he called me an infidel, and that I couldn't stand. (Laughter.)

The Lord Mayor—It was certainly a capital way of showing that you were of the true faith to give your friend a whack.

Defendant—I said that I thought the French acted more rationally in their arrangements about Sunday than we did in England, and he told me that he considered the French were a gang of infidels, and I was not a bit better. I couldn't stand that at all. (Laughter.)

The Lord Mayor—Now I'll tell you what it is. I believe every word each of you says, for it is evident you are both gentlemen, and I am convinced you bear no animosity to each other.

Both—Not the least in the world.

The Lord Mayor—Then I'll tell you what my decision shall be. Will you abide by it?

Both—Certainly, my Lord.

The Lord Mayor—Why, then, shake hands, like a pair of good-hearted honest fellows as you are.

The parties looked at each other for a moment, and then cordially shook hands.

The crowd in the justice room burst out into laughter at seeing the reconciliation so easily effected, whereupon the complainant and defendant, as if apprehensive that they were dropping their dignity before the mob, let go each other's hand, and walked out of the room apparently on fresh terms of indignation.

It was however observed by one of the officers, that as soon as they got into the street they went homewards arm in arm.

The New Orleans Bee of the 23d ult. says—"yesterday we experienced a very severe storm in this city, which caused considerable damage to the shipping in port. Sixteen ships, we understand were driven from their moorings; and the ship Gen. Shand, had her mizen mast carried away."

Five Thousand Girls.—Among other tokens of respect which will be shown to the President and Vice President, about five thousand of the fairest of the fair, unmarried, and young, elegantly dressed in white, will join a procession to meet and greet them on their arrival in this town.—Lowell Mer.

A VISIT TO BEDLAM.

I went into a yard appropriated to those who had been acquitted of various crimes on the ground of insanity. Some were walking to and fro, singly and in groups; many were sitting about in the sun, conversing on common topics; one was practising a pirouette; another took off his hat every ten paces, threw it in the air, then dropped rapidly on his knees, assumed the attitude of vehement supplication for the smallest possible division of time, arose before the hat fell, and attempted to catch it, not with his hands, but his head. He frequently succeeded, for long practice had rendered him skilful at this strange, mad, miserable game. A third, with his hands fettered to an iron band belted about his loins, entreated me to give him a few halfpence to buy tobacco. The keeper whispered his crime in my ear, and I shrank from him with mortal disgust. A pale attenuated creature, of gentlemanly manners, offered me snuff; we talked for a few moments as to the relative merits of Bolongaro and Hardman's Thirty-Seven, and an exchange of boxes was the climax of our conversation.

Many years before, I had been present at the trial of a man for an attempt to kill his wife, after having lived with her in uninterrupted concord for almost half a century. She was the principal witness; the case was clearly proved, and the judge called on the prisoner for his defence. It amounted to a simple denial of the imputed crime. Aggravated at this, the poor wife rushed up to the bar, exclaiming with a simplicity that even affected the clerk of the arraigns "Oh! John, wilt thee make me out a liar too? Hasn't thee done enough? He's mad, gentlefolks, he is truly?"

And over those iron spikes which surrounded that terrible pew the old pair thrust out their gaunt and shrivelled arms, and in a convulsive hug forgot their mutual misery. They had nine children, all of whom were dead but one; and he, the youngest, was supposed to be far away, fighting as a corporal of Sepoys, in the torrid East.

"Mad," exclaimed the Judge, "what does the poor woman mean? How is this?" "Oh! my lord," said an old man, in a timid faltering tone, "he has been mad, off and on, these two years."—I'm sorry to bear witness against a neighbor, but truth is truth."

The Jury rose—the barristers rose—the whole court rose, and the Judge energetically exclaimed, "Man, come forward! Good God! we might have easily convicted—we might have legally murdered him!—Had the wife dropped the least hint—poor ignorant creature—that he was insane——"

"He ant insane," blubbered the aged prisoner, raising his head from his wife's shoulder. "He'ant mad," he vociferated, still hugging the decrepid darling of his youthful days; "I be worse—I've bin a fool—I be wicked—I knew what I was about. You may deceive yourselves, but you can't deceive me." The human rock had been touched by the mystic rod; his tears had gushed out; but whatever might be his present state, it was satisfactorily shown that he had been a lunatic; and he was accordingly sentenced not to death, but to be disposed of as His Majesty should think fit.

I found the old man in Bethlehem: he had wept himself blind. The keeper, who wore a clean smock frock, observed that he did nothing but cry; that he was washing himself away—I use the man's own words—that, not having handkerchiefs sufficient to sop up his tears, he had taken to the skirts of his coat, and they were consequently as dripping all day as though he had been in a boat, and heedlessly allowed them to hang over the gunwale! I'm sorry for it, but I can't deny that I laughed heartily, recklessly, desperately, at the fellow's exaggeration.

My exclamations, and they were quite involuntary—I could not have smothered them had I been in a mourning coach—unfortunately awoke a wretched inmate in a cell below. I did not look through the bars, to which many of the madmen flocked to see the tiger in his cage; but I fancied him, stretched upon straw, stark naked, and horribly writhing under a mortal fetter upon every one of his muscles. His voice was that of a fallen archangel. There was a mysterious, an appalling mightiness in it. Every sound that he uttered was dreadfully pictorial.—Physically, I merely heard him; but mentally, I saw Sampson struggling! He must have been superhuman. He was an Italian; yet he uttered nothing like the Tuscan. He had a language of his own; it bore no affinity to any among those which are spoken by the sane; still it was intelligible—the heart understood it. His theme was evidently sublime wrath, and colossal agony. His groans were Satanic; his despair was equal to that of the dethroned Saturn. An imaginative man may fancy what would be the bitter bellowings of an African Lion bound down by the grisly honors of his mane to those sands which he was accustomed to spurn; but they would be gentle as the cooings of a dove compared with the ocean roar of this maniac. It was awful; it was sublime; it seemed to have no origin; to be without end; it was, to the soul, eternal. It gave the bodily ear an idea of one of the million tremendous choristers, who excited by intensity of anguish, make the vault of a Presbyterian hell vibrate with their horrible glee. Would that I had never heard it!

The greater part of those who surrounded me seemed so calm and rational, that I ventured to ask the keeper if he thought they were all really mad? "No more mad, sir," he replied, "than you or I; their internal passions and propensities make them appear so. When a man commits a crime he is regularly hung, but if his offence be perpetrated under circumstances of original atrocity, he is interred to be insane, and consequently saved. Nine tenths of the fellows here are mere monsters of iniquity; there are indeed a few poor wretches who labor under delusions which it is impossible to eradicate—I'll show you a specimen."

I followed him to a cage which contained a common-looking man in a frieze coat, gray breeches, and mottled worsted stockings. "There" said he, "is a mad murderer; he came here because he killed a peeler. He would take as much delight in destroying you as a cat would in killing a mouse." The keeper retired for a few minutes, and the madman walked to the substantial grating. "Don't believe him, sir," said he; "he is a brutal villain. This morning he beat me to such a degree that I was mashed into the circumference of a pint-pot; no thanks to him that I have recovered my proper dimensions."

Podagra Miseries.—Gout is a dignified disease, and there is an air of luxury about the very "appliances and means" by which its victims are surrounded; but there are other painful affections of the feet which many are ashamed to acknowledge, and which few are disposed to pity. Look at that lovely sylphlike elegante—see how she treads the fairy mazes of the dance on the "light fantastic toe." Alas! every step she takes sends a thrill of agony to her brain; she has corns upon those pretty feet. What a neat pair of boots that spruce-looking gentleman wears. Yes, he is striving to appear quite at ease, and unconscious of inconvenience, whilst those very boots are torturing and aggravating a neglected bunnion. That young man hobbles along in pain; he has a toenail which grows into the adjacent integuments. And are these maladies incurable?

The last Anecdote.—"Who's that are Mr. Scattering that always gets a few votes at our town meetings," inquired an old lady a few days since of her spouse, as she was busily engaged in perusing a newspaper. "I don't know," said he, "nor I never did, though the people have been trying to elect him ever since I first began to vote."

SPIRITUOUS LIQUORS.

"A great outcry has been raised of late against these liquors by the Temperance Societies, while they patronise the use of wines and malt liquors. This is a distinction without a difference. Every description of spirituous or fermented liquor, when taken in excess, is injurious to health. It is true, however, that dram-drinking is the most baneful. It is proscribed for the laboring classes, though allowable for the affluent in the shape of liqueurs. A moderate use of ardent spirits, in a diluted state, is beneficial.

"WINES.—Wine was first used by Noah; and Pliny informs us that it was indecorous for the Roman women to taste this fluid. Its chemical composition consists of water, alcohol, acid, tartar, saccharine matter, extract, aroma, and colouring matter. Alcohol varies as to quantity; the strong, rich, and full-bodied wines yield one third of spirit, while thin, light wines yield but one-sixteenth. Brandy, the spirit of wine, is made by distilling that fluid.

"Sweet wines are very nutritious, but disagree with most stomachs, from their tendency to undergo the acetous fermentation. Wine acts as an astringent and antiseptic on dead animal matter. Rhenish wine contains carbonic acid and supertartrate of potass, and has been said to diminish fullness of habit, and to be of use in calculous disorders. Champaigne contains a great quantity of carbonic acid, and hence induces intoxication very quickly. Burgundy, also, produces intoxication rapidly, and is said to be more nutritious than the other wines. Claret contains sixteen per cent of alcohol, causes pains in the limbs similar to gout, by deranging the stomach. Italian wines contain much alcohol and saccharine matter. Hock and genuine port contain twenty-three per cent. of alcohol. Madeira and sherry contain an equal quantity of spirit, and hence are recommended at present in fevers and dyspepsia. Wine increases the animal heat, exhilarates the spirits, renews strength, promotes digestion, and the expulsion of excretions. There are various sorts of wine which Pliny beautifully describes in these words, "tot vina quot agri," and are further diversified by age, taste, smell, and color, and they affect the organs differently.

Anecdote of Handel.—When Handel was staying at Chester, on his way to Ireland, he applied to the organist to know whether there were any choirmen in the Cathedral who could sing at sight, as he wished to try the chorusses which he intended to perform in Ireland. The organist mentioned some of the best singers, and among the rest a printer of the name of Janson, who had a good bass voice. A time was fixed for this private rehearsal, but alas! on trial of the chorus in the Messiah, "and with his stripes we are healed," poor Janson, after repeated attempts failed so egregiously, that Handel, after swearing in four or five languages, cried out in broken English, "You schauntrel, tit not you dell me dat you could sing at soite?" "Yes, sir, says the printer," and so I can; but not at first sight.

A Calculation.—Some pains-taking citizen has made a calculation that there are 400,000 segar-smokers in the United States, that puff away 9,000,000 of dollars annually. The same calculator makes 600,000 chewers, and 500,000 snuffers, whose amiable propensities cost annually seven millions!

HOW TO LIVE LONG.

"RULES FOR TAKING FOOD.—Food should be taken whenever there is an appetite; and this is the only rule that can be laid down as to the proper time for the different meals.

"It is of the greatest importance that our aliment should be properly divided, or, as the faculty have it, masticated and taken slowly.

"Eating fast, or bolting, is highly injurious, because the food is not properly divided, or chewed; and hence it is acted on with difficulty by the fluid in the stomach, called gastric fluid. The effects will be an uncomfortable sensation in the stomach, flatulence, heartburn, listlessness, low spirits, indigestion. All professional men, those who follow sedentary employments, as tradesmen and men of business, labor under indigestion, lowness of spirits, or, to use a popular phrase, blue devils. They fancy ten thousand evils, a host of incurable diseases, a series of imaginary misfortunes, and that all men are in open war with them; loss of health, incurable disease, utter ruin, mendicancy, and the workhouse, are all in prospective. The proper mastication of food, is an effectual remedy for these evils.

"It is highly detrimental to take too much drink at meals, as this dilutes the gastric fluid and weakens it, thereby rendering it incapable of dissolving the food in the stomach. The French take wine during dinner, the English afterwards; and the consequence is, that the former, notwithstanding the heterogeneous and divers articles they take, are less blue devilish than our countrymen.

"Wine, taken with food, stimulates the stomach, increases the gastric fluid, and promotes digestion; but when taken freely after dinner, dilutes the gastric fluid, and impedes digestion.

"It is wrong to take exercise for two hours after a full meal.

"Food should not be taken to satiety at any repast.

"Dyspeptics, or those whose appetite is capricious or diminished, should attentively observe these hints. They should avoid late suppers, and take a walk in the open air for half an hour or more before each repast.

"No rule can be properly laid down as to the hours of meals, or the quantity of food to be taken. Nature excites desire or appetite, and is the only safe guide. She instinctively points out those aliments which best agree with individuals, and whatever agrees ought to be taken and preferred. In health or disease, her dictates may be safely followed. She scarcely ever misleads; but may require the guidance of the faculty. The desires of the sick or infirm are not to be gratified in every case—there are exceptions."

French Leave.—A very respectable looking young woman, apparently between the age of twenty-five and thirty, called a few days since upon a family in this city, and requested to be boarded a short time, stating that her husband had gone into the country, but would soon be back. She was admitted into the family, where she remained until Monday last, when it was ascertained that she had taken French leave, and embarked on board the steam boat for the east, having left, however, by way of collateral security, a fine, plump, rosy-cheeked boy about one month old! The little fellow is doing well, has already enlisted many friends in his behalf, and will, no doubt, one of these days be sufficiently able to make up for the deficit occasioned by the unceremonious exit of his unnatural mother, or whoever the female might be that was induced to take such a step. She arrived here on Friday last, said her name was Patterson, had on a green calash, light blue striped gown, and black silk apron; her countenance pale and a little freckled. Whatever the fate of the mother—success to the little foundling!—Detroit Courier.

A writer in the Friendship's Offering, commences a chapter with "I love an old maid." Who can say as much? Much as he may admire an old maid, he omits to tell us how much better he likes a young one!

The value of the ornaments in gold and silver, belonging to the churches in Mexico, is computed at thirty millions of dollars.

The undersigned begs to inform the Subscribers and Friends of this Paper, that in order the better to deserve and increase the patronage so liberally bestowed on it, he has associated with him as joint Editor and Proprietor Mr. John Inman, whose established reputation in the Literary world is a sufficient proof that this Journal must reap advantage from such an arrangement.

CHARLES J. B. FISHER.

The undersigned respectfully informs his friends and the public that he has entered into an arrangement with the proprietor of this paper by which he has become associated in its management, and interested in its prosperity. It will hereafter be conducted by the late sole Editor and himself for their joint benefit, and as they hope for the pleasure and advantage of their readers. To his personal friends, the undersigned will hold himself under especial obligations for support and encouragement in the undertaking upon which he has thus engaged, assuring them that his endeavors shall be assiduously and zealously applied to the furtherance of their enjoyment as readers in return for the kindness they may display towards him by becoming subscribers: to those whose acquaintance he has not the pleasure of enjoying, he will only say that he hopes time will give him that satisfaction in his editorial at least, if not in his individual character.

JOHN INMAN.

New-York, June 22d, 1833.

The Editors and proprietors of the Traveller and Spirit of the Times, in announcing the arrangement which has united them in those capacities, respectfully solicit the countenance and support of their friends and well-wishers.—They are aware that "performance is better than promise," and will not therefore take up the time of their readers with extensive professions of what they intend to accomplish; they are grateful for the encouragement their paper has already received, and will do their best to deserve the Editors' universal desire, "continuance and increase of subscribers," by sending forth weekly, a pleasant, readable paper.

THE EVENTS OF THE DAY.

Somebody has remarked that the first want of the Americans in general, and of the good people of New York in particular, is something to do; the second, something to talk about. Supposing this to be true, the last fortnight has been a joyful time for our fellow citizens, seeing that materials both for action and conversation have been abundant.—We have had among us the President and a great Indian Chief; a balloon has gone up and come down again; and what with one startling event and another, we have been kept on the qui vive from morning till night, and from night till morning again. Trials of vast interest have been terminated; the Duchess de Berri has contributed her quota to the population of the world, and John Randolph has departed, leaving a blank behind him which will not soon be filled. These, and a hundred other incidents of less general interest, have in succession afforded occasion for the indulgence of that universal appetite for comment and speculation, with which we are charged, and we are willing to own, not unjustly. Each in its turn has enjoyed its brief moment of popularity, and now the general cry is "what next." The President has gone on his way, gathering smiles and honest assurances of welcome, and reaping the harvest of his well-earned renown; the fearless voyager, whose towering ambition despises the earth and the ocean, has turned his steps to the south, intent we presume upon glory and gain; Black Hawk and his party have seen all the sights and been talked at, and stared at, and talked about until there is nothing more to be said or seen; the gallant militia have basked in the smiles of beauty and the hot sunshine, to the full satisfaction of even their appetite for glory; and now we are all ready for the grand question of "What next?" The contested elections have furnished their due share of excitement, and Ex-Sheriff Parkins has been set at large with the consoling assurance that he is not crazy; Mr. Barry has had his benefit; the Kembles are turning their faces northward; the new opera house is not yet finished; Sir Thomas Beevor has sailed for England; the man with the beard has become an old story, and the world of New York is agape for something to talk about.

The Cholera still lingers along the streams of the west, and the Grippe has not yet crossed the Atlantic; nullification has been as a thrice told tale any time these six months, and the insatiable public has begun to be tired of Randolph and his reminiscences: what is to come next? Happily for us all the fourth of July is at hand with its dinners, its speeches, its toasts and its parades; in a few days we shall know whether the Standard is really to be discontinued, and whether the Knickerbacker is or is not to be edited by Mr. Flint; these will fill up the time till the glorious fourth, and then the whole city will rejoice in a tumult of punch, eloquence, glory and patriotism.

JOHN RANDOLPH.

Ever since the decease of the celebrated original of Roanoke, the newspapers in various parts of the country have vied with each other in sketches of his character, anecdotes, reminiscences, and remarkable sayings. Some of these are sufficiently characteristic, and of course odd and amusing: one of the best is recorded in the American, and develops a curious feature in the mental organization of President Jefferson.—The Philosopher, it seems, prided himself much on his skill at chess, and often invited Randolph to the contest: Roanoke however declined, knowing that he could beat the challenger: at last he was prevailed on to play a game, and won it as he expected—the consequence was the loss of Jefferson's friendship.

When Randolph was on his passage to Russia on board the Concord, he gave to one of the officers copies of his correspondence with the Executive relative to his appointment, and also of his instructions, with copious remarks in his own hand, some of which are sufficiently pungent and Randolphian: these documents have been carefully preserved, and we have hopes of obtaining permission to copy some portions into our columns; should we succeed, we venture to promise our readers no small fund of amusement.

A NEW COLOR.

In one of our exchange papers we find a description of Black Hawk as he appeared at Norfolk, which states among other particulars that "his ears were ornamented with a profusion of black and white beads, and surrounded by a broad stripe of white vermilion painted on the flesh." We are somewhat puzzled to form an idea of this white red; it is worse than a green blackberry.

THE RECORD OFFICE.

The sixth and last of the pillars prepared for the front of the Record Office was put up on Thursday: the effect from Chatham street and the Park is very fine we admit, but it does seem a little odd that six such masses of marble should support nothing heavier than a wooden portico.

A VISIT TO AN AFRICAN KING.

FROM AN UNPUBLISHED VOLUME OF TRAVELS.

After breakfast I went with my friend the Frenchman to pay a visit to the King, who resides in a part of the town walled in for his seraglio or household. Having arrived at the palace, we had to mount a rudely constructed ladder which required great care in handling; we were then ushered into a spacious bed-room, very neatly built of plants, the walls being partly covered with pieces of looking glass, and numerous little colored engravings, most of which were turned upside down. He also possessed several chairs of European manufacture; these costly articles were held in high estimation, and were the envy of surrounding princes! They had been given to him as a kind of bonus, previous to commencing traffic, by the masters of slave and other traders, he having in his royal will established a law that "no Captain of any vessel shall make trade until he has paid an introductory fee." After waiting in this room a few minutes, his majesty entered—but without a flourish of trumpets. His royal niggership appeared verging on sixty, extremely stout, and suffering greatly from elephantiasis, each of his legs being the size of a moderate man's body. The whimsicality of his costume produced a commotion in my risible muscles, which I was fearful might hurt the royal feelings; it was composed of a long narrow robe or piece of cloth, which served him for jacket, trowsers and every thing; this garment of many occupations was wrapped loosely round his corpulent figure, with his bare arms hanging outside, having forced their way out by means of a couple of slits in the cloth; sleeves being too great an effort of genius for the tailors of Fetish town. Through an occasional opening might be observed a sad lack of linen, or if any existed, it was of the same complexion with his face. The majestic head was partly covered by an old brown beaver hat, with a portion of the rim hanging over one ear, and the front strangely distorted, the hat being squeezed on a head about twice as large as it was originally intended for. His royal feet were destitute of any covering whatever, he not having yet added a pair of shoes to his regalia. This was the whole of his gear, and probably of his wardrobe.—His majesty most graciously shook me by the hand, and then conducted me to the head of the room, where seating himself, he desired an attendant to bring me a chair, which being done, a short pause ensued as usual, when he commenced by asking through an interpreter "what news there was abroad." This was uttered in a mild friendly tone, as if the prelude to a long conversation. I must confess this general question rather puzzled me at first; but feeling confident that the inquirer did not know France from America, I answered in the first words that came, to the effect that nothing had occurred since the Dutch had taken Holland. He appeared much pleased with this answer, and I have no doubt, though I took him for a well informed king, as having been able to ask a question which admitted of a reply; and like a wise general he said no more lest he should lose the laurels he had gained. I then stated my expectation of the ship's arrival in the afternoon, when the captain would probably pay him a visit; he replied that he should be very happy to see him, and would supply us with any thing we might require which the place would afford. Here our conference ended, and having again shaken hands, we descended the ladder.

This kingly personage is, it appears, a great bon vivant, and drinks brandy by tumblers full with as much satisfaction as any young lady sips tea. He is also possessed of about three hundred wives, some of whom, report said, were very fine women; but report here is black, and as thick lips and flat noses are the fashion in this part of the world, my curiosity was not sufficiently excited to induce me to risk my head in order to obtain a peep at the dismal beauties of his harem—The government of this despot is of the most arbitrary nature, and he takes off heads for the most trifling offences; nay, I was told that when in the humor, he is not very particular whether the unfortunate victim has committed any—He has one very striking peculiarity in majesty, which is a great delight in performing with his own hand the duties of executioner; whether this arises from motives of economy or a rational taste for such refined amusements, I am not able to say: but it is affirmed that this Kingly Jack Ketch sometimes decapitates half a dozen of his loving subjects before breakfast.

THINGS THAT ARE TRUE.

It is true—though few are acquainted with the fact, that the President of the United States actually passed through this city last week:—for we have conversed with several persons who saw and knew him, in spite of the pains which were taken to conceal his presence.

It is true that we have to thank Genl. Jackson for the first good sweeping our streets have endured for a long time—and also that we must make much of it, for as the age of miracles is past, such a wonder is not likely to occur again soon.

It is true that Mr. Durant is constructing some new fashioned paddles to be appended to his Balloon that he may be enabled "to sail like a Witch in the eye of the Wind."

It is true that Black Hawk and his party prefer sleeping under their beds, to resting on them: but it is uncertain whether it is a matter of taste, or mistake,—as they were told they were there, not as prisoners but only as board-ers.

THINGS THAT ARE DOUBTFUL.

It is doubtful whether the splendid Broadway Furniture will fetch more than three times its value, notwithstanding it has been so lately used by General Jackson.

It is doubtful now whether Ex-Sheriff Parkins will ever become President of the United States.

It is doubtful whether Graham's Bread and Water doctrines would find willing disciples even in Sing Sing.

It is doubtful whether the Bostonians have got up a better reception for the President than he had here, notwithstanding their threat to swallow up our poor Battery by opening the mouths of their far famed Common.

It is doubtful whether the "Wandering Piper" is a Duke in Disguise, or a rogue in reality:—but it is no longer doubtful that he finds his account, "among the profits," by thus employing these "piping times of peace."

THINGS THAT ARE NOT TRUE.

It is not true that Mr. Van Buren sawed away the timbers from the Battery Wall in order to abridge the term of the Presidency.

It is not true that the Prophet has foretold that Gotham in the year 18—, will become the seat of a Monarchical Government:—nor that Fashion intends to crown her Idol by the title of Queen "Frances the first."

It is not true that Mr. Durant in his late trip to the clouds called on the Man in the Moon:—nor is it a fact that that profile gentleman assured him that the Ladies of Luna wore longer clothes than those of New-York.

It is not true that our streets are going to be cleansed again this year.

It is not true that the Battery is going to remove to the Washington Parade Ground,—or that the Gothamites intend on its present site to make something of Clay in honor of Jackson.

Supporters of the Church.—The Church of St. Catherine Coleman is supported on its right and left by a Jew's synagogue and a public house!

A RAINY DAY IN PARIS.

FROM AN OLD MSS. JOURNAL.

A rainy day! powers of painting, poetry and sculpture! which of you can do justice to the miseries of a rainy day in Paris! what but memory can duly conceive the horrible minutiae of that most unearthly of human afflictions! My curtains were close drawn till a late hour; I distinctly heard Baptiste come in at the usual time to make my fire—I could even dimly perceive his motions through the half opened door, as he passed from one part of my drawing room to another, in the prosecution of the nameless, indescribable duties of his morning avocation. But I had a sentiment that it was raining—the damp breath of the demon had penetrated even to my sanctuary—the clock seemed to tick louder and louder every moment—it struck! but still I clung to my place of refuge—alas, mise-ies must be encountered! man cannot lie abed forever even in Paris—breakfast must be eaten when it is brought. I am up and dressed; at least I have indued my nether habiliments, my slippers, my waistcoat, and my morning gown. I am shaved—all the commands of personal neatness have been scrupulously fulfilled—I am at breakfast. Madame la Cuisiniere, your coffee is unimpeachable this morning; the roll is fresh and baked to an instant, and the butter is heavenly. But my joys are tinged with a dash of disaster—the rain, the rain! Do I not hear the eternal monotonous, hopeless, patter, patter, patter upon the resounding tin roof of the market that lies spread out like an encampment, beneath my window! And when for an instant, the murmuring sound of the passing vehicles is hushed, and the voices of the drenched marketwomen cease for a brief moment, do I not hear the cold, heart-chilling dash of the big drops upon the slippery pavement! The winds roar above my chimney top, and the smoke dares not venture forth in the face of the blast. Ha! that was a blinding puff! but I cannot blame the curling vapor, for I too cling to the shelter of the house. But is there no hope? will not the sun come forth once more in his majesty, and put to flight the demons of the flood? Vain expectation! there is no blue cloud of promise in the sky, no cheering flash of sunbeams to waken in the heart one thought of clearing up—all above is dark, and dull, and leaden—and the vast expanse of heaven seems covered with one sheet of dreary vapor. But hark! there is the sound of footsteps; the clattering sabots thumping and splashing as the baker's boy scuttles away thro' the pitiless pelting of the storm. Where are now the blind beggars that used to pass every morning under my window, with a punctuality from which most clocks might take an example! gone, all gone and the little sweep! I have not yet heard his doleful cry—all have yielded to the fury of the elements except that eternal water-seller; it is his element: his life is spent among streams and wells, and all watery places, and he fears not the pouring of the deluge: his pails are filled from the heavens, so that half his daily task is saved; his dolorous voice mingles with the gusty howlings of the wind, and the splash of the rain drops, and the gurgling of the gutters, and the giblet-like creaking of the lamps, suspended over the middle of the street, and swinging and fluttering about in the face of heaven—and the unhappy donkey that inhabits that small shed—his song is even more touching and mournful than it was—it is clear that his sensibilities are no proof against the horrors of the day, and his loud complaints declare the heavy pressure of his sorrow. But what! did not my eyes deceive me! was that indeed a gleam of sunshine! blest omen, with joyful heart I welcome thee—the clouds are passing away, and the winds will soon be still, and I, like a released prisoner, will go forth and enjoy the unexpected blessing.

ELEGY ON A FROG.

Alas poor Frog! and has th' unerring dart
Of Death relentless pierced thy little breast,
And stilled for aye the throbbing of thy heart!—
Then peaceful sleep and dreamless be thy rest.

No more along the streamlet's weedy shore
Thy graceful form in glittering pride shall bound;
Thy dolorous voice at blushing eve no more
Adown the vale in harmony resound.—

Ah! dimmed and marred is now thy gay green coat,
Thy golden eye is closed in wakeless sleep,
And death's cold hand has grasped thy tuneful throat—
Its swelling notes are hushed in silence deep.

The murmuring night wind o'er thy grassy grave
Shall breathe a gentle sigh, and mournfully
Above thy head the pensive elm shall wave,
And sadly shed a dewy tear for thee.

The young spring violet's lovely azure eye
Shall weep at morning and forget thee not:
The rippling streamlet as it wanders by
Shall fling a silver wave to kiss the spot.

Thither slow hopping shall at eve repair
The speckled band in wreaths of cypress clad,
To mourn their brightest dark in death, and there
Thy motley love shall croak thy requiem sad.

A RAT, A RAT.

We find the following curious paragraph in one of our exchange papers, from the interior of Pennsylvania.

"A rat in descending the river yesterday, came in contact with the steam boat William Penn, and did her some slight injury; the damage would have been serious if it had not been for the exertions of the hands on board the steam boat."

We have heard of a whale staving in the bow of a ship, and of a sword-fish piercing the planks of a stout West Indiaman; but the rat has beaten both whale and sword-fish: the shock must have been tremendous. It has been decided we believe that damage by rats is not one of the perils covered by policies of insurance, and that it must be specially mentioned to entitle the shipper or owner to recover from the underwriters.

Perhaps, however, the rat in the paragraph above quoted, was accidentally printed for raft.

BEEF! BEEF! BEEF!

Their gallic neighbors "many a time and oft" have reproached the English nation for their partiality to "Roast Beef," "Roast Beef," and good room there is and was for thinking they must be pretty well made up of Butcher's meat, for we find that in London alone the consumption of Beef, Mutton and Pork is—prodigious. There are 150,000 oxen consumed annually, 50,000 ... of the same family, called calves—700,000 full grown sheep, and 250,000 of their little ones. While 200,000 of the unclean beasts are roasted, boiled and dried, to give flavor to the more insipid food.

The value of all this butcher's meat is estimated at eight millions, five hundred thousand pounds,—a considerable sum to share among the blue aprons, and graziers. 330,000 tons of Fish are said to be brought into London in the year with poultry, butter and cheese, too numerous to mention. The gallons of Ale and Porter amount only to 72 millions, the ditto of Spirits only just eleven millions, added to 65,000 pipes of Wine. What glowing visions of Punch and Port rise up at the enumeration!—But the ladies have their share of the drinking too, for their Tea Tables &c. require 7 millions, nine hundred thousand gallons of Milk. We wonder what portion of a Londoner's time must be consumed in consuming:—it must occupy at least twenty six hours per diem,—and then what's to become of their digestions!

We know not how many omnibuses there are in London, but we perceive that the driver of No. 3,926 has been fined for carelessness.

A SUNDAY AT HOBOKEN.

"Will you come to the bower I have shaded for you,
Your bed shall be roses all spangled with dew."

Allow me sir, to suppose you safely arrived at Hoboken, and Miss —— but mum—we would'nt mention her name for the world, for who knows but the young lady may be taking the trip "under the rose," at the blind side of a surly old father; and heaven forfend, that we should put any young gentleman to the risk of dying an old bachelor by revealing his love secrets.

Well then we'll suppose you safely ashore, and flapping the dust from Mademoiselles sandals with a cambric kerchief carefully kept apart for that purpose. We next discover you seated at your ease under one of Swift's arbors, and sipping a —— but no, it's too cold as yet for ice, and rather too warm for brandy; besides, it's to be presumed the lady don't drink brandy on any terms; and so to be as near the mark as possible, we'll let you off with a mint julep, or a glass of wine and water. This being discussed, and the few honey, and very secret communications, that of course follow on the strength of it, up ye get, and off ye set for the Elysian Fields.

"And oh if there be an Elysium on earth,
It is this—it is this."

Thus far we have escorted you, and now, deeming that our company might be intrusive, as a third person generally spoils sport, we leave you to your own felicity—to draw comparisons between that azure heaven, and your lady's eyes—between the odours, stolen from the young flowers by the roguish zephyr that is now wooing the gossimer drapery on your lady's bosom, and her balmy breath—and between—but perchance you might deem it a libel on her beauty to compare even the living sun himself to your ladies smiles—adieu.

Now for to revel in the glory of this paradise by ourself—for alas! what young lady would place herself under the wing of a musty brain spinner, who goes a ruralising, more for the purpose of making items, than of making love. However, we have one comfort any way; being no lady's private property, we can make bold to take a peep under every body's bonnet that comes in our way, without running the risk of getting our ears pulled, or having the teapots broken on our heads for our presumption.

Well, here we have taken cognizance of four and twenty little ladies in four and twenty seconds, and tumbled heels over head in love with every one of them.—What a very extraordinary thing, this love is, particularly in warm weather! Heigh ho! there is no resource for us but a glass of ice cream—Ice cream is the sovereign's remedy on earth for making an old bachelor, do you know it. Signs by it, we seldom hear of an elopement taking place at the North Pole; or of a young Laplander hanging himself in his mistresses garters, on the strength, perchance of seeing her stamping rather suspiciously on his rival's toe at a late tea party. Oh! no—these northern gentlemen are the most down right, reasonable, consistent, unsentimental, wretches imaginable: But then, to be sure the ladies "down at zero" are not over and above calculated to produce contrary effects.—Only look at this, five feet of perfection fluttering towards us!—rather short to be sure, but with all, is she not sufficient to create a palpitation, and a flame in the heart of an icicle!—Alabaster forehead, rainbow brow, and her eyes eternally leaping about from one object to another and apparently catching new glories from them all. But what shall we say about cheeks, and lips! Descend upon us, all ye gods, and goddesses of lillies, roses, and tulips, and help us to a simile—But avast there!—perchance it may be just as well not to trouble ye this morning, as the task we were going to essay is extremely dangerous, for who knows, but after a very graphic and scientific treatise on the subject we might have the mortification of discovering we had been all the time paying homage to the brilliant qualities of a sixpenny packet of French rouge.

"Oh they resemble
Blue water lillies in the breeze

But who is this? an angel by gemini! though south to say, she takes up more than her own share of the pathway. We have often heard of a person with a mighty soul, but this lady has the double pleasure of having a pair of them. What an extent of understanding! and what an inexpressible pity it never underwent the Chinese process of modeling. Mercy on us how she turns up her nose at us! as much as to say, we should fix our affections on things above; or in other words, give to her eyes, the attention we have just now been paying to her ancles! Madam we will prove your most devoted servant by obeying your mandate to a letter, and indeed taking all the pencillings, paintings and other fashionable arrangements that some young ladies' faces are heir too, into consideration, we must say, that Miss N——, of Whitehall street has a countenance of loveliness that makes full amends for a pair of the ugliest feet in the universe.

* * * * * * * *

We will look no more!—the force of attraction in the gravity of a pretty eye or instep, is truly alarming; more especially on those who are obliged to draw upon their brains for the accommodation of their palates. There now—only think of it—Miss N. and that other little merry vixen, with the roving eye have actually run away with all the inspiration we have been imbibing from hill, river, meadow, and ocean. The spirit of patience be our ministering angel in this moment of perplexity as we sojourn to the waters for a fresh supply, trusting that no wicked young lady will be for making her own of it, before we have it safely deposited in the hands of the printer.

* * * * *

What a paradise is this! How indescribably beautiful, and how refreshing to the soul, the emotions its trancendant loveliness creates! It is true, it has none of these striking or sublime features, that have made the Lakes of Laune, and Geneva the subject of undying song: but for the softer touches of nature, for all that is most simply beautiful, is it not every thing that hope could picture, or fancy revel in.

The sea is one wide pave of golden dimples—the heaven is one boundless field of spotless azure (save where yonder silver fringed fleecy cloud, skirts lazily along, haply the chariot of some roguish Cherub, coming to draw comparisons between our Sunday beauties at Hoboken and his own ethereal sisters in heaven.) And the sun upon his pathway course seems as if actually melting into liquid flame, for his glances have less the appearance of rays, than of showers of light; dancing from the heavens, and bathing, and beautifying all below.

But we are growing sentimental and sublime, &c. &c., and so perchance, it were just as well to be jogging, but before we go we cannot for the life of us forbear quoting a little passage from Moore and moulding it into our own purpose, by wishing Hoboken and its attendant scenery was a

"dear little spot of our own
In a bright summer ocean far off and alone" and here we can improve on the poet's hint by also wishing for a sweet little maid that we wot of, and likewise a friend and pitcher to share our solitude.

* * * * *

Now we are on the glorious Hudson; and now, hang it we are again in the city, deafened by the eternal whirl of carts, coaches and jingles—choked and blinded, by the dust and smoke, and—and—in short obliged to take refuge from the confusion in our own "home of the muses" and to ease the burden, which the day's adventures have laid upon our heart, by sharing a part of it with the public. We will conclude by exclaiming with Whitehead; and by the way his couplet just fits our present purpose to a hair:

"The night has hung her curtains overhead
And so we'll take the hint, and go to bed."

ADVICE TO DUELLISTS.

The principles of the duello are strict and exceedingly well established, and the maxims laid down for the government of those cholenic gentlemen who take delight in drilling holes into each other's body corporate, are the result of such long experience that one would hardly suppose it possible to suggest any improvement. Some benevolent member of the Faculty however has recently taken it upon himself to propound a new code of observances for the pugnacious, some of which we should think, would be worth taking into consideration at least. Among his suggestions are two which appear very rational, although we are free to confess that the hitherto peaceful tenor of our life has not qualified us to speak on this topic with a voice of authority. The first relates to the position of the combatant; the instruction given by the most accomplished professors of the duello has heretofore been, to stand with the side facing the antagonist, so as to present the smallest possible quantum of substance for his aim: but this it should seem is wrong, inasmuch as the ball is more likely to lodge than it would be if the hit man had presented a fair front: in that case the villanous lead would go through and at least save the surgeon the trouble of finding and getting it out, to say nothing of the inconvenience of having one's vitals tormented for an hour or two with a merciless probe.—The other suggestion applies to the size of the pistol; it has been the fashion of late years to use very small bullets, and very weak charges of powder. But this, it appears, is a rank heresy, and for the same reason. The ball should be large, and the propelling force sufficient to drive it through any thing short of a brick wall: otherwise the ball lodges again, and the wound closes over it, or if it does not the hole is so small that the operator has a great deal of cutting to do before he can get at the unpleasant intruder.

TO A YOUNG GAZELLE.

"Draw thy likeness!"—as soon
Would I attempt to draw you moon
Down from her high and beauteous sphere,
And circumscribe her orbit here;—
With my frail breath as soon essay
To keep the warring winds at bay,
Or blow out every starry light
That burns upon the dome of Night—
Beacons of ancient time! that keep
Their vigils on heaven's azure deep.

"Draw thy likeness!"—bid me make
The sun his trendless course forsake;
Unbend the circle of the earth,
Command a new creation's birth,
Subvert the poles, transverse each law
That holds this wondrous world in awe—
But, "draw thy likeness"—do not ask—
Lady! 'twould be the harder task.
Oh! I should have to wing my flight,
And blend my colors to the light
And shade of every tender tone
That beams through heaven, and heaven alone,
There, humbled at my vain endeavor,
Think meanly of myself forever.

THE ITALIANS.

Our readers are no doubt aware of the fact, that a portion of the Italian Troupe, including its three "bright particular stars," a short time since, proceeded to Boston for the purpose of giving concerts. On Tuesday night last, they appeared for the first time in that most musical city, and if we may judge from the transports of the Transcript, with a success that has astonished themselves as well as their hearers. The following extract puts all our Cognoscenti and Dilettanti to the blush—or ought to; nothing was ever said here half so grand.

"All hesitancy and doubt, as to a just appreciation by our public of the Italian style of singing, was dissipated by rapturous and oft repeated plaudits. The thrilling notes of the Signora, the surpassing tenor of Montresor and Pedrotti, and the deep, deep tones, and thundering bass, of Fornasari,—shaking earth to its foundation—the power and volume of voice—its divine melody, and harmonious blending—carried away captive head and heart, judgment and enthusiasm. Every one calls for the whole Troupe and the Opera. The season is now late—too late perhaps for the adventure, but we hazard nothing in asserting that in the fall or winter, "Italian Opera" may be established here, which shall receive more patronage in a week, than it ever received at New York or Philadelphia in a fortnight."

We acknowledge the "thrilling notes of the Signora, the tenor of Montresor, and the deep, deep tones of the exquisite Fornasari," although we confess certain doubts as to the "shaking of earth to its foundation;" but who is the Pedrotto whose tenor is so surpassing? If he be the gentleman of that name who favored us once or twice, his voice must have improved wonderfully—As for the concluding assertion about "patronage," we hope that the event may prove it correct—but we have our doubts, master Transcript. Remember the peacocks and Mrs. Austin—

RHYMES TO THE EYE

BY A DEAF GENTLEMAN.

I longed for Dublin, thinking there to laugh
With jolly tiplers o'er their usquebaugh,
For I've a merry heart, and love that pace
Which London hath not good at any price.
Thither I went; but once, ('twas at the plough)
Some time uncounted after I'd enough,
I sallied forth, and in the street alas!
I plunged into a horrible fracas;
So horrible that all my bones did ache
And I was forced to ride home in a coach,
Entreating Dora to procure a pot
Of salve from the chirurgical depot.
Next morn I had a great mind to indict
The bludgeoneers, but could not well convict
And fain was I to take their promises
Of good behavior touching many bruises—
But if again they catch me in that region
(Well named Ireland: since I am not a lion)
The world may call me fool, and I'll say yes,
For I dont like bones battered and black eyes.

On Wednesday evening when Mr. Barry took his "Farewell Benefit" the company expressed an unanimous wish to assemble round him when he took his leave of the audience, that they might thus express their respect for him, and their share in the regret of his parting scene. Mr. Barry, from motives of delicacy, declined while he thanked them for this display of their good feelings but the tender of the compliment is equally creditable to both parties.

While the President was reviewing the troops in the Park, Major Donaldson, his Private Secretary was at his elbow watching the scene, when an ancient negro with a head of grizly grey, stood by and was explaining to his sable cara sposa, who and which were the great personages of the scene—"Dats de Presydent wid the white head," said he, and then pointing out the Major, added "and dat gemman, side his elbow, dat's de Black Hawk."

THE PIPES.—Among the new publications announced by one of the publishing houses in Boston, we perceive the "Tour of the wandering Piper through part of Scotland and Ireland, written by himself."

BALTIMORE RACES.—Central Course.

Second Day, Wednesday 19th June.

Through the politeness of a friend who witnessed it, we have been favored with the result of the second day's running, which he describes as a well contested and interesting Race. The Course however was in very bad condition,—heavy rain falling all the time.

Purse $500—3 mile heats—Entrance, $20.

| Dr. Duvall's ch. h. Ace of Diamonds by Rob Roy, 5 years old, | 4 | 1 | 1 |
| J. M. Botts's b. h. Rolla by Gohanna, 4 years old, | 3 | 2 | 2 |
| Mr. Garrison's b. h. "Z. A." by Marion, 5 years old, | 2 | 4 | dis. |
| Col. Selden's b. h. Duke of Orleans by Sumpter, 5 years old, | 1 | 3 | dis. |
| Mr. Sherman's De Witt Clinton. | | | |

Time, 6.5—6.3—6.3.

In the 1st heat De Witt Clinton was decidedly the favorite and little doubt existed that he would win the race, as he was running a head of the field, hard in hand; but from the slippery state of the Course, he fell,—threw his rider, and was distanced. The Duke of Orleans took the heat though closely pressed by Z. A. Considering the state of the Course, the time was pretty fair.

In the last two heats "Rolla" severely pressed Dr. Duval's "Ace of Diamonds," and when it is remembered that he has travelled four or five hundred miles this spring, and is much weakened by it, his running must be considered very good. She was game to the last, and the "Ace of Diamonds" only proved the trump card by about half a length.

RUSSIAN DISCIPLINE.

Much has been said and written respecting the obedience of the Russian soldiery—and many striking instances presented to the public. But we question whether an example can be found in the whole compass of the history of Russia that displays in so striking, we had almost said, startling manner, the severity of the discipline as the following:

During that revolution which placed Elizabeth on the throne of the Czars, Prince Golofkine, and his wife, were exiled to a spot within the Polar Circle, and there shut up in one chamber. The unfortunate Princess was soon worn down by grief and misery. She died; and the body having lain four days before the eyes of the wretched husband, he at length persuaded himself to part with it, and begged it might be removed for burial. The Russian guard replied to this request, that their orders were to suffer none to go out of that prison chamber; and the dead body was thus left as the putrifying companion of the husband till the return of a Courier who had been sent for orders to St. Petersburgh—a distance of 2000 leagues.

An accident happened on the Rail-road near Honesdale, on Thursday morning last, by which a young man from Wilkesbarre, by the name of Peter Kidney, lost his life. As the cars arrived at the place where the horses are usually left, he stepped down before the car to unloose the horse, and fell under the wheel, which dragged him several rods before he was extricated. One of his legs was badly broken: it was amputated, but he survived only a few hours.

CONUNDRUMS.

Why are the modern Egyptians the most unnatural children on the face of the earth?
Because they sell their mummies—[mammas.]
What sauce is proper for a dull book?
Reading sauce.
When is a man thinner than a rail?
When he's a-sharing.

Castle Garden.—This delightful place must scarcely know what to make of itself, from the crowds of visitors it has been in the habit of receiving lately. Thousands on thousands thronged within and upon its walls to receive the President! Scarcely less was the crowd that assembled there to see Mr. Durant make the last magnificent ascent in his Balloon, and on Monday evening another tremendous assemblage took place to see Black Hawk and the Fire Works, and we firmly believe that among the many thousands that have assembled on these occasions, but one opinion exists concerning the beauty of the place, and the excellence of all its arrangements.

THE MINSTREL.

The Minstrel has ceased—never more shall he weep,
All his sad songs of grief are unspoken;
And his wild Harp for ever in silence must sleep,
For its chords, like his poor heart, are broken.

How oft in his moments of sadness I've listened,
To the anguish that breathed in each lay;
And have marked how the tear in his pensive eye glistened,
When he sang of his home far away.

Yet he sought not the smile that on wealth is bestowed,
Nor the joys that on fortune attend;
For he knew he should soon reach that happy abode,
Where the poor find a Father and Friend.

Then take the wild Harp, let it lie on his grave,
Though he felt not the pangs of his breast;
In life 'twas his friend, his companion and slave,
And its last dirge has lulled him to rest.

For the Heart that's now cold, like its once magic springs,
May have yielded to feelings sublime;
And the Harp, like the hand, that once swept o'er its strings,
Has been touched by the finger of time.

Fishing.—If any disciple of Izack Walton is in want of fit implements to carry on his war against the finny tribe, let him repair to Taylor to repair his stock. With Rods and Lines, or hooks and baits, he cannot get better supplied than at this capital store No. 1 1-2 Maiden Lane, where civil and obliging manners add value to his line, and much good information gives point to his hooks.

Niblo's Garden.—Is any one afflicted with Blue Devils,—let him go to Niblo's! Has any one a spare hour of an evening? let him pass it at Niblo's! Is any one fond of music, gaiety and the smiles of beauty, let him go to Niblo's. Loves any one an ice cream? Niblo can furnish it! Likes any man a glass of Punch? Niblo can make it for him!—Loves any man a merry Tale? Niblo can tell him one? If any doubt it, let him go and see,—if any wish it, let him go and try.

TH' UNDYING ONE.

NOT BY THE HON. MRS. NORTON.

The hue of health is on his face,
And I am twenty-four;
He talks, hunts, and loves the chase,
Altho' he's now four score.
Oh! why were uncles made so stout,
Depriving us of fun;
I really do begin to doubt,
He's the Undying One.

While my companions are in town,
Cutting a mighty dash,
Here I must sit, and mope, and frown,
Because He has the cash!
'Twas only last week that he burst,
His double barrell'd gun,
Yet was not harmed—I'm surely curst,
He's the Undying One.

The female mentioned in an evening paper of Saturday, as having been missed on Friday afternoon, has been found among her friends in New Jersey. We understand she has been subject to occasional fits of derangement.

NEW BOOKS.

WALTHAM—A Novel.—This is the third number of the Library of Romance, a London publication conducted by Mr. Ritchie: the first and second numbers were very respectable and worth reading, but Waltham is poor enough. The story is common-place, and the whole work bears strong marks of having been written to order. The only attempt at originality is in the fatalism of Waltham, and that is not very well managed. The hero and heroine of the tale—meaning by hero and heroine the parties whose love, crossed for a time, is at last merged in marriage and happiness, are a pair of uninteresting personages, and none of the other are much better except the Scotchman. Mr. Ritchie must get up better books for his Library, or its term of existence will be but brief. Waltham was republished in Philadelphia.

RECOLLECTIONS OF A CHAPERON—J. & J. Harper.—Written it is said by a Mrs. Sullivan; edited, the title page informs us, by Lady Dacre. We have no knowledge of Mrs. Sullivan, and therefore presume that this is her first production; we hope that it will not be her last. Its greatest charm is in the peculiarly delicate, feminine spirit by which it is strongly marked, and which gives to it a character essentially distinct from the mass of its contemporaries. Ellen Wareham, the first and longest of the five stories, is one of the most touching and beautiful narratives we have read for many a day; the others are lady-like and highly interesting, but there is no character in either of them so lovely, so perfectly pure and delightful as that of the exquisite Ellen.

Boys and Girls Library.—The Young Crusoe—By the same publishers. This is one of Mrs. Hofland's admirable stories for young folks. Her "Son of a genius" has enjoyed a most extensive and well deserved popularity, and we think that the Young Crusoe will be not less highly esteemed. The object of it is to show the efficacy of patience, fortitude, industry and perseverance, in surmounting difficulties, and the amiable and accomplished author in the fulfilment of her design, has produced a story abounding not only with interest, but also with instruction, and that too of a most valuable quality.

Works of Sir Walter Scott.—Conner & Cooke—The Seventh and eighth numbers of this complete and amazingly cheap edition, were published yesterday. They contain the Bride of Lammermoor, the Legend of Montrose, and Ivanhoe; we are happy to learn that the extensive demand for this edition warrants the belief that its enterprising publishers will make a handsome profit on their investment.

Waldies Circulating Library.—We have received the tenth number of the second volume, containing a portion of the memoirs of Dr. Burney by his daughter Madame D'Arblay—but too late for examination this week.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

The communication of Veritas, containing a dialogue between Adonis and Mr. Querist, is not interesting enough for insertion. The state of things it is designed to illustrate undoubtedly exists, but we do not know of any good effect that is likely to result from its publication; besides our object is to amuse our readers, and Veritas will admit that there is nothing particularly comical in his article.

H.'s jokes are deficient in point; we suspect that there is a great deal of exaggeration in his last story, and we have no disposition to excite contempt or ill-will against the public authorities when we are not well assured that they deserve it.

The description of a fight between two females is deficient in wit and interest, and is too coarse for insertion.

The communication signed Xmoppking (as near as we can make it out,) has puzzled our whole establishment, compositors, devils and all; why will gentlemen authors write such vile scrawls when there be teachers of penmanship at every third corner?

We cannot publish A. C—c's will for him until we are assured of his decease. Besides, we think he has not dealt fairly by us in the distribution of his chattels—a rhymester's brains are hardly worth the taking.

A short way to be Married.—A young couple went, not long since, into the study of a late judge of our Supreme Court, who, by virtue of a commission as Justice of the Peace, was authorized to solemnize marriages, and desired him to marry them. "Very well," said his honor whom they found writing, "pass me your certificate, and you may go." The man handed a certificate that the banns had been published, but remained. The Judge continued his employment, until the impatient bride-groom again announced the intention of his visit. "Very well," said the Judge and again pursued his task. After some further delay, the neglected applicants once more reminded his honor of their desire to be married. "Why, go home," said the magistrate; "you have been married this half hour." And it was true. The law only requires an acknowledgement of intention before a Justice of the Peace, and a recognition of that intention by the justice in his official capacity. There is no form of words necessary to the purpose, nor any ceremony, other than a simple declaration, which the Judge did not permit for a moment to disturb his meditation.—Ohio Examiner.

It is said of Mr. Randolph, that in coming from Norfolk in one of the steamboats, a French barber stepped into the cabin. The moment he caught Randolph's eye, he was greeted with—"Sir, this cabin cannot contain you and I—one of us must instantly leave it." "Sir," said the barber, in broken English, "I have paid my passage and have a right to come here." "I repeat, you or I must instantly leave it." The Frenchman hesitating, Mr. R. called out to his servant to bring him his double-barrelled gun. It was brought, when he adjusted the priming, cocked, and brought the piece to his shoulder, said "Now sir, we'll see who goes," whereupon the Frenchman cleared the stairs at a step and about a half.

WASHINGTON.

The annexed graphic description of the "Temple of Fame, and its illustrious inmates, is from the very eloquent address delivered by the Hon. G. M. Dallas, before the Societies of Princeton College.

"The liveliest attachment to your country may be farther and rationally justified by recollections of a kind less abstract than those thus briefly referred to.

Visit for a moment, gentlemen, the temple of fame. Let fancy guide you, with truth and history as your companions, up its elevated steps, and into the resounding hall, where are congregated the sculptured images of all the wise, the good, and the great. As you enter that vast rotunda, see, who is he whose majestic statue fills the proudest, loftiest niche? Whence is he, towards whom ancient sages, heroes and statesmen, starting from the crowded walls, seem to look and lean as if acknowledging his supremacy? Whence is he, whom Leonidas, Thrasybulus, Aristides, and Epaminondas, grouped congenially together, are gazing at with deference and admiration; before the calm dignity of whose front, the blood shot eye of Macedonian Alexander sinks rebuked, and even the accomplished Cæsar throws his laurel crowns away, sighing with the fatal memory of the Rubicon? Whence is he towards whom Socrates points the attention of his pupil Alcibiades, as an illustration of the virtue he had fruitlessly inculcated? for whom, as a kindred, to superior spirit, Camillus, Cincinnatus, and Cato, seem to glow with welcome, and in presence of whose sublime simplicity, the Trajans, and the Antonines are hiding the vain ornaments which encircle their brows? Let us draw nearer to this preeminent object. As we approach, its recess enlarges, and clustering round the pedestal of the chief figure, are many who seem principally to delight in, and to boast of their association with him. Whence and who is he?—The world can answer. In the smooth adamant on which he stands, no one has thought it necessary to chisel his nativity or name. He is the one without parallel:—beyond all Grecian and all Roman fame:—never to be forgotten, never to be mistaken.

THE DRAMA.

Park Theatre.

Mr. I. Mason took his benefit on Monday Evening on which occasion his gifted relatives lent him the assistance of their powerful names, and he had to return his thanks to them and to as full and fashionable a house as his most sanguine expectations could have pictured.

Black Hawk and his party attended the theatre on Tuesday and gazed from the side box on all the gaieties and gravities of the Evening with muscles as pliant as those of marble busts.

Mr. Barry took his Farewell Benefit on Wednesday and his bill presented almost as many stars, as are named in Keith's astronomy. At the end of the performances Mr. Barry was loudly called for, and took his leave of his old friends in New York amidst the most unequivocal testimonies of esteem and regret.

On Wednesday Evening the opera of "Fra Diavolo," was produced for the first time here, and if it be conceded that in matters of opera the first performance is only the last rehearsal, it went off pretty smoothly. But the allowance made in consideration of its being their first attempt, cannot of course extend to those with whom it should be familiar, and if the opera was rendered unnecessarily dull on its first night, and that should mar its future success, the blame must materially rest with those whose utter ignorance of even the words is not to be excused on any ground.

In the construction of this opera both author and composer must have had "the Brigand" in their mind's eye;—for the plot, situations and characters of both, bear a strong family resemblance.

The dramatic portion of an opera is usually a mere frame for hanging sheets of music on—but in this there are some very fair incidents, and many opportunities for good acting which might be much better used than they were.

Auber, is the original composer of the opera, and like a skilful author, no doubt had his reasons and object, for every piece of music, and even for its rotation, working up his effects to a certain given point:—and his plan is as much destroyed by any departure from it, as would an architect's if the pillars of his temple were made to surmount the roof, at the caprice of some "Committee of Taste." So has it pleased the tribe of arrangers and adapters—those false beacons that mislead, not guide him who expects they will light him on the way to sound musical taste,—to engraft on every Author's works the heterogeneous productions of other pens. And this Opera of "Fra Diavolo," shares the usual fate. Auber and Rossini are constrained into a forced partnership as composers, when their styles amalgamate about as well as water and mercury; and though the music may appear sweet to those who can dispense with the union of sense and sound, we cannot think for our own part that Auber's "Fra Diavolo" required to be stuffed with the stolen pieces of a dozen others, to render the work of so delightful a composer successful. It is all in bad taste, and we can never hope to be reputed a musical community, while we thus require to be gorged like children with sugar plums and sweetmeats. We did not note all the intruders, but among them were a duett from "Tancredi,"—an Aria from "Jean de Paris,"—an English ballad, a buffa aria from "La Gazza Ladra,"—and a bravura from "Robert le Diable." An agreeable medley no doubt, but no more constituting an Opera, than alternate scenes of Othello and the Gamester would improve one or the other.—Mr. Sinclair sang the music of "Fra Diavolo" with taste and skill, particularly his Barcarole "How gaily rows,"—and the Ballad of "Young Agnes,"—but in point of acting his Marquis and his Brigand were totally unlike what they were intended for. The author has made Lord Goslington a most Trollopian caricature, and Mr. Reynoldson heightened rather than diminished the coloring; he sang his music however with the skill and tact of a musician, particularly his Buffa Aria, "There was a time,"—a fact which some of the violinists seemed in considerable doubt about, and tried two or three till they got the right one. Mr. Richings looked "every inch" a Brigand and made a prominent figure of the little part of Beppo. Mrs. Austin was the Zerlina of the Opera, and accomplished the acting of a scene of extreme difficulty even to a practised actress, with much good taste and effect. Her singing the Cavatina "Day light love has passed away," called forth an encore, but we think she would find it much more effective if sung in quicker time. Her song and prayer on retiring to rest were charmingly sung, but the second strain of the prayer should break from her lips, as if in her dream, when the Brigand's dagger is held above her, and cause him to drop his uplifted arm. Her Bravura "Hark! the Trumpet is calling," was sung in magnificent style, and assured us that a second hearing of it and the Opera, must improve the effect of both. The Military Chorus was very full and good, but we wonder where they learned that it is customary with soldiers to kneel and remove their caps at sound of the Vesper Bell. 'Tis true this is no fault of theirs, but of their director, who might easily learn that the soldiery neither do one or the other, even in Italy.

Mr. Jones's Benefit took place last night, when a young lady, who is a pupil of his, made her first appearance in an operatic part, though she some time ago appeared in the "Child of Nature,"—the performance trenched too much on our time of going to press to enable us to give any comments on the performance.

Mr. Blakely takes his Benefit on Thursday next, and we sincerely hope it will prove a Benefit to him,—his Bill of Fare promises a full equivalent for the price of admittance.

Bowery Theatre.

The old established pieces still attract good houses to this Theatre, and render novelties and critics equally unnecessary. The Indian Chiefs made this House their first place of theatrical Entertainment in this city. The centre Box was appropriated to them last Saturday which gave the audience an excellent opportunity to gaze their fill of admiration or astonishment.

Mr. Tathill takes his Benefit on Wednesday and produces on the occasion an intensely interesting Drama called the Warden of Galway founded on one of the exciting Legends of old Ireland.

Mr. G. Jones takes his on Friday, and appears as "Hofer, the Tell of the Tyrol" for the first time.

The Greenwich Savings Bank, incorporated at the last session of the Legislature, is to be opened at 10 Carmine street, on Monday the 1st of July. When it is considered that the "New York Bank for Savings," since its establishment in 1819, has transacted business with 35,000 individuals, and has received in deposit nearly $8,000,000 of which more than $2,500,000 now remain under its charge, invested in stocks and drawing an interest of about $125,000 per annum, and when it is further considered how much the population of the city, particularly in the upper wards, has increased since the date above mentioned,—there can be no doubt that the new institution, located as it is at least a mile and a half from the other, will be a great convenience to the public, and essentially increase the aggregate amount of deposits. We cannot too earnestly recommend to persons having small sums accruing from time to time which they do not particularly need, to avail themselves of the opportunities afforded by these institutions.

FIDGETS.

READER!—had you ever the Fidgets? you answer, Never,—recollect yourself. "Think again," is the advice of one of the most eminent sages, and no one ever hurt himself by attending to the caution. Was you ever in love? (as who has not been) then you must have felt the Fidgets; did you ever hear a report that your Banker had stopped payment, when you had a considerable sum in his hands? or get a letter announcing a fall of 5 per Cent in the Stocks, just in time to be too late to withdraw an order you had sent to your attorney to sell out a few thousands? then you must have felt the Fidgets; if you still hold the negative, we give you up as impenetrable; you will certainly die of ossification of the heart.

Fidgets may be divided into two classes, general and particular; the latter we are all subject to experience at times: the former belong to a set of people distinguished for little else, than being particular without exactness, and cautious without prudence; they somewhat resemble the dog in the manger, keeping those around them uneasy, without benefitting themselves. Do you see that young lady, who is playing with the lap-dog, and looking rather uneasy? she certainly has the Fidgets; see, her eye turns to the corner of the room; Ah! there's the cause, that handsome young fellow is paying some little attentions to a lady who sits there, not very particular indeed, but still sufficient to excite the Fidgets. Look out of the window: do you see that man in the rusty black coat buttoned up to his chin, who is standing on the opposite side of the street? he seems uncertain whether to stand still, advance, or go back; he is in the Fidgets till he knows what direction the person will take who is standing at No. 25; he is aware of owing him a certain amount of pounds, shillings, and pence, a demand for which, would not be very agreeable in the present state of his affairs.

These, however, may be only symptoms of the particular Fidgets, and will disappear with the cause of their excitement; but your regular Fidget is never at rest, and seems almost to glory in an opportunity of being extraordinarily fidgetty, like John Bull, who is never comfortable unless he be grumbling. A fidgetty person cannot endure to see the fire stirred by any one but himself, and generally considers himself entitled to the dignity of "King of the Poker;" if he ever do delegate his authority, it is only to find fault with its execution; he is to a considerable extent, an "imitative animal," as no matter what be doing around him, he cannot be satisfied till he has "a finger in the pie."

Should he be obliged to make a short journey, he takes his seat a week before the day he intends to depart, is in fidgets the whole evening previous, that he may get to bed in time, for fear of oversleeping himself; gets up and disturbs the whole house about "three" in the morning" in his extreme anxiety to be ready for the coach, which starts at six precise; he is almost sure to cut himself while shaving, scald his mouth by taking his coffee too hot, or bespatter his best drab inexpressibles, by rising from table in such a hurry, as to overturn on them an egg, which he has been obliged to leave, (not being accustomed to eat raw ones), and having ordered it up before it was warmed through; after all he gets to the coach-office a full half hour too soon.—Should he happen to be seated beside the driver, or guard, they are annoyed by repeated cautions or inquiries, as to the dangers of trotting down hill, turning a corner at full speed, or galloping over a level with a rise in front. Should it happen that he travels by a steamer, it is still worse, there is not only the danger of being drowned, but also of being blown up; when on deck, he takes his station by the pilot, at as great distance as possible from the engine, keeping a sharp eye on the funnel, as if he expected every instant to see it fly into the air; and he gets ten-fold more fidgetty, if the engineer should require to diminish the pressure, and thereby permit an escape of steam. When he goes below, he perches himself in the farthest corner of the cabin, and, if you observe him attentively, you will remark, that for every shake which the machinery communicates to the vessel, his body gives a corresponding shudder; but, as a fidgetty man is never good company, we shall leave him to travel without further remark. If the man of fidgets is in business, and has property liable to fire or sea risks, he is obliged to insure it; but you may be sure he feels fidgetty on hearing that the consignment arrived safe, or, that the goods or property have been disposed of, without having incurred any damage, which may come within the range of his insurance; it grieves him to the heart to think he has paid the insurance for nothing. Is he advised by his friends to insure his life? he may do so, but every year's premium he pays he considers as so much money thrown away; one would be apt to think he had grown fidgetty at himself for living too long!

From the Philadelphia Gazette.

NOTES OF A TOUR.

PITTSBURG, June 1823.

Gentlemen:—I witnessed this afternoon a terrible display of the fury of the enraged elements. It was an exhibition such as I never before saw, and such an one, as I pray Heaven I may never stand exposed to again. I will mention particulars:—

A party of gentlemen, filling three gigs, left this place this morning on a visit to Braddock's Fields, the scene of the dreadful slaughter of the English army by the Indians, in 1755. The spot is about nine miles from the city, on the banks of the Monongahela, and we reached it about noon. We spent about two hours in walking over the field of battle. A gentleman who resides in the neighborhood, very kindly pointed out to us the ambuscade, in which the Indians were hidden, the spot where Braddock fell, fatally wounded, the retreat of the army under the direction of Washington, who on that day, most gloriously signalized himself as an efficient officer, and indeed every other prominent part of the ground. We trod over these fields, now under cultivation, and flourishing with vegetation, and recalled to mind the events of that day. The furrows of the plough had turned up the bones of warriors, who had fallen dead on the field of glory. Remains of bones are still visible. In our rambles we picked up several pieces, as well as an arrow barbe, flints, musket balls, &c., which I have carefully preserved. On our return, the occurrence took place to which I have alluded above.

We had arrived within about two miles of the city, when we saw in the west symptoms of a coming storm. They were trifling, and we felt confident we could reach the city before the rain began. In this expectation we were disappointed; and before we had proceeded three hundred yards, thick black clouds suddenly enveloped us, rendering the atmosphere very dark. In an instant, a large tree on our right tumbled down with a tremendous crash, sending the limbs and fragments in every direction. It commenced hailing and blowing awfully. We saw ourselves in a tornado, and hastily jumped out of the gig. While endeavoring to keep up our horse, who was nearly thrown down by the wind, I lost my hat. I ran after it, but was blown violently against the fence on the opposite side of the road. Recovering myself, I again ran, but never shall I forget the sensations that passed through me. Tree after tree went down with a prodigious crash, literally filling the air with splinters and fragments,—the wind rushed and roared with a horrid noise,—the air was black with dust and the pelting of the hail; and the force of the wind rendered it impossible for me to keep my feet. On reaching my hat, I stumbled upon an elderly lady, who, with three children, one at the breast, had alighted from a wagon, the horses attached to which in their fright, had become unmanageable. A gentleman attached to our party seized one of the children, I another, and with the mother between us, we endeavored to make our way to a neighboring barn. This we reached, but we had no sooner entered the door, than a large part of the roof was blown entirely off, leaving us exposed to the most imminent danger.

This place we left instantly, and after immense labor, we made our way to an adjoining house, where we were gratified in depositing the children in safety. The lady was in great distress for her infant, it being her firm belief, while exposed to the storm, that it had perished in her arms. When she found all safe, she sank down in a state of utter exhaustion.

The storm was not yet over, though its fury was mainly spent. While in this place of safety, we witnessed more of its devastating effects—a new house within a hundred yards of our retreat, was blown down, an entire orchard was prostrated, and trees, fences, and out-buildings razed to the ground as if by magic. The scene was most dreadful.

Our party escaped with whole skins, but with little else. One of our gigs was whirled about in the air for some time, but was only triflingly injured. Our apparel was completely spoiled.

In the city the tornado was less terrible, but the storm of rain and hail was very severe. Great numbers of trees, awnings, light buildings, &c. were prostrated, but I have not learned that any lives were lost.

I had made arrangements for leaving this place to night, but passing through this scene has unfitted me for a tour at this time. I shall therefore remain a day or two longer, to refit both in health and apparel.

MILY JOURNAL.

Second Day, Wednesday 19th June.

Through the politeness of a friend who witnessed it, we have been favored with the result of the second day's running, which he describes as a well contested and interesting Race. The Course however was in very bad condition,—heavy rain falling all the time.

Purse $500—3 mile heats—Entrance, $20.

Dr. Duvall's ch. h. Ace of Diamonds by Rob Roy, 5 years old. 4 1 1
J. M. Botts' b. h. Rolla by Gohanna, 4 years old. 3 2 2
Mr. Garrison's b. h. "L. A." by Marion, 5 years old. 2 4 dis.
Col. Selden's b. h. Duke of Orleans by Sumpter, 5 years old. 1 3 dis.
Mr. Sherman's De Witt Clinton.

Time, 6.5—6.3—6.3.

In the 1st heat De Witt Clinton was decidedly the favorite and little doubt existed that he would win the race, as he was running a head of the field, hard in hand; but from the slippery state of the Course, he fell,—threw his rider, and was distanced. The Duke of Orleans took the heat though closely pressed by Z. A. Considering the state of the Course, the time was pretty fair.

In the last two heats "Rolla" severely pressed Dr. Duval's "Ace of Diamonds," and when it is remembered that he has travelled four or five hundred miles this spring, and is much weakened by it, his running must be considered very good. She was game to the last, and the "Ace of Diamonds" only proved the trump card by about half a length.

RUSSIAN DISCIPLINE.

Much has been said and writ n respecting the obedience of the Russian soldiery—and many striking instances presented to the public. But we question whether an example can be found in the whole compass of the history of Russia that displays in so striking, we had almost said, startling manner, the severity of the discipline as the following:

During that revolution which placed Elizabeth on the throne of the Czars, Prince Golofkine, and his wife, were exiled to a spot within the Polar Circle, and there shut up in one chamber. The unfortunate Princess was soon worn down by grief and misery. She died; and the body having lain four days before the eyes of the wretched husband, he at length persuaded himself to part with it, and begged it might be removed for burial. The Russian guard replied to this request, that their orders were to suffer none to go out of that prison chamber; and the dead body was thus left as the putrifying companion of the husband till the return of a Courier who had been sent for orders to St. Petersburgh—a distance of 2000 leagues.

An accident happened on the Rail-road near Honesdale, on Thursday morning last, by which a young man from Wilkesbarre, by the name of Peter Kidney, lost his life. As the cars arrived at the place where the horses are usually left, he stepped down before the car to unloose the horse, and fell under the wheel, which dragged him several rods before he was extricated. One of his legs was badly broken: it was amputated, but he survived only a few hours.

CONUNDRUMS.

Why are the modern Egyptians the most unnatural children on the face of the earth?
Because they sell their mummies—[mammas.]
What sauce is proper for a dull book?
Reading sauce.
When is a man thinner than a rail?
When he's a-sharing.

Castle Garden.—This delightful place must scarcely know what to make of itself, from the crowds of visitors it has been in the habit of receiving lately. Thousands on thousands thronged within and upon its walls to receive the President! Scarcely less was the crowd that assembled there to see Mr. Durant make the last magnificent ascent in his Balloon, and on Monday evening another tremendous assemblage took place to see Black Hawk and the Fire Works, and we firmly believe that among the many thousands that have assembled on these occasions, but one opinion exists concerning the beauty of the place, and the excellence of all its arrangements.

THE MINSTREL.

The Minstrel has ceased—never more shall he weep,
All his sad songs of grief are unspoken;
And his wild Harp for ever in silence must sleep,
For its chords, like his poor heart, are broken.

How oft in his moments of sadness I've listened,
To the anguish that breathed in each lay;
And have marked how the tear in his pensive eye glistened,
When he sang of his home far away.

Yet he sought not the smile that on wealth is bestowed,
Nor the joys that on fortune attend;
For he knew he should soon reach that happy abode,
Where the poor find a Father and Friend.

Then take the wild Harp, let it lie on his grave,
Though he felt not the pangs of his breast;
In life 'twas his friend, his companion and slave,
And its last dirge has lulled him to rest.

For the Heart that's now cold, like its once magic springs,
May have yielded to feelings sublime;
And the Harp, like the hand, that once swept o'er its strings,
Has been touched by the finger of time.

Fishing.—If any disciple of Izack Walton is in want of fit implements to carry on his war against the finny tribe, let him repair to Taylor to repair his stock. With Rods and Lines, or hooks and baits, he cannot get better supplied than at this capital store, No. 1 1-2 Maiden Lane, where civil and obliging manners add value to his line, and much good information gives point to his hooks.

Niblo's Garden.—Is any one afflicted with Blue Devils—let him go to Niblo's! Has any one a spare hour of an evening? let him pass it at Niblo's! Is any one fond of music, gaiety and the smiles of beauty, let him go to Niblo's. Loves any one an ice cream? Niblo can furnish it! Likes any man a glass of Punch? Niblo can make it for him!—Loves any man a merry Tale? Niblo can tell him one. If any doubt it, let him go and see,—if any wish it, let him go and try.

THE UNDYING ONE.

NOT BY THE HON. MRS. NORTON.

The [illegible] of health is on his face,
And I am twenty four;
He [illegible] hunts, and loves the chase,
Altho' he's now four score.
Oh! why were uncles made so stout,
Depriving us of fun,
I really do begin to doubt,
He's the Undying One.

While my companions are in town,
Cutting a mighty dash,
Here I must sit, and mope, and frown,
Because He has the cash!
'Twas only last week that he burst,
His double barrell'd gun,
Yet was not harmed I'm surely curst,
He's the Undying One.

The female mentioned in an evening paper of Saturday, as having been missed on Friday afternoon, has been found among her friends in New Jersey. We understand she has been subject to occasional fits of derangement.

NEW BOOKS.

WALTHAM—A Novel.—This is the third number of the Library of Romance, a London publication conducted by Mr. Ritchie; the first and second numbers were very respectable and worth reading, but Waltham is poor enough. The story is common-place, and the whole work bears strong marks of having been written to order. The only attempt at originality is in the Byronism of Waltham, and that is not very well managed. The hero and heroine of the tale—meaning by hero and heroine the parties whose love, crossed for a time, is at last merged in marriage and happiness, are a pair of uninteresting personages, and none of the other are much better except the Scotchman. Mr. Ritchie must get up better books for his Library, or its term of existence will be but brief. Waltham was re-published in Philadelphia.

RECOLLECTIONS OF A CHAPERON.—J. & J. Harper.—Written it is said by a Mrs. Sullivan; edited, the title page informs us, by Lady Dacre. We have no knowledge of Mrs. Sullivan, and therefore presume that this is her first production; we hope that it will not be her last. Its greatest charm is in the peculiarly delicate, feminine spirit by which it is strongly marked, and which gives to it a character essentially distinct from the mass of its contemporaries. Ellen Wareham, the first and longest of the five stories, is one of the most touching and beautiful narratives we have read for many a day; the others are lady-like and highly interesting, but there is no character in either of them so lovely, so perfectly pure and delightful as that of the exquisite Ellen.

Boys and Girls Library.—The Young Crusoe—By the same publishers. This is one of Mrs. Hofland's admirable stories for young folks. Her "Son of a genius" has enjoyed a most extensive and well deserved popularity, and we think that the Young Crusoe will be not less highly esteemed. The object of it is to show the efficacy of patience, fortitude, industry and perseverance, in surmounting difficulties, and the amiable and accomplished author in the fulfilment of her design, has produced a story abounding not only with interest, but also with instruction, and that too of a most valuable quality.

Works of Sir Walter Scott.—Conner & Cooke—The Seventh and eighth numbers of this complete and amazingly cheap edition, were published yesterday. They contain the Bride of Lammermoor, the Legend of Montrose, and Ivanhoe; we are happy to learn that the extensive demand for this edition warrants the belief that its enterprising publishers will make a handsome profit on their investment.

Waldies Circulating Library.—We have received the tenth number of the second volume, containing a portion of the memoirs of Dr. Burney by his daughter Madame D'Arblay—but too late for examination this week.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

The communication of Veritas, containing a dialogue between Adonis and Mr. Querist, is not interesting enough for insertion. The state of things it is designed to illustrate undoubtedly exists, but we do not know of any good effect that is likely to result from its publication; besides our object is to amuse our readers, and Veritas will admit that there is nothing particularly comical in his article.

W.'s jokes are deficient in point; we suspect that there is a great deal of exaggeration in his last story, and we have no disposition to excite contempt or ill-will against the public authorities when we are not well assured that they deserve it.

The description of a fight between two females is deficient in wit and interest, and is too coarse for insertion.

The communication signed Xmoppking (as near as we can make it out,) has puzzled our whole establishment, compositors, devils and all; why will gentlemen authors write such vile scrawls when there be teachers of penmanship at every third corner?

We cannot publish A. C—c's will for him until we are assured of his decease. Besides, we think he has not dealt fairly by us in the distribution of his chattels—a rhymester's brains are hardly worth the taking.

A short way to be Married.—A young couple went, not long since, into the study of a late judge of our Supreme Court, who, by virtue of a commission as Justice of the Peace, was authorized to solemnize marriages, and desired him to marry them. "Very well," said his honor whom they found writing, "pass me your certificate, and you may go." The man handed a certificate that the banns had been published but remained. The Judge continued his employment, until the impatient bride-groom again announced the intention of his visit. "Very well," said the Judge and again pursued his task. After some farther delay, the neglected applicants once more reminded his honor of their desire to be married. "Why, go home," said the magistrate; "you have been married this half hour." And it was true. The law only requires an acknowledgement of intention before a Justice of the Peace, and a recognition of that intention by the justice in his official capacity. There is no form of words necessary to the purpose, nor any ceremony, other than a simple declaration, which the Judge did not permit for a moment to disturb his meditation.—Ohio Examiner.

It is said of Mr. Randolph, that in coming from Norfolk in one of the steamboats, a French barber stepped into the cabin. The moment he caught Randolph's eye, he was greeted with—"Sir, this cabin cannot contain you and I—one of us must instantly leave it." "Sir," said the barber, in broken English, "I have paid my passage and have a right to come here." "I repeat, you or I must instantly leave it." The Frenchman hesitating, Mr. R. called out to his servant to bring him his double-barrelled gun. It was brought, when he adjusted the priming, cocked, and brought the piece to his shoulder, said "Now sir, we'll see who goes," whereupon the Frenchman cleared the stairs at a step and about a half.

WASHINGTON.

The annexed graphic description of the 'Temple of Fame, and its illustrious inmates, is from the very eloquent address delivered by the Hon. G. M. Dallas, before the Societies of Princeton College.

"The loftiest attachment to your country may be farther and rationally justified by recollections of a kind less abstract than those thus briefly referred to.

Visit for a moment, gentlemen, the temple of fame. Let fancy guide you, with truth and history as your companions, up its elevated steps, and into the resounding hall, where are congregated the sculptured images of all the wise, the good, and the great. As you enter that vast rotunda, see, whence is he whose majestic statue fills the proudest, loftiest niche? Whence is he, towards whom ancient sages, heroes and statesmen, starting from the crowded walls, seem to look and lean as if acknowledging his supremacy? Whence is he, whom Leonidas, Themistocles, Aristides, and Epaminondas, grouped congenially together, are gazing at with deference and with rivalry, before the calm dignity of whose form, the bland aspect of Macedon, in Alexander, sinks rebuked, and even the accomplished Cæsar throws his laurel crowns away, sighing with the fatal memory of the Rubicon? Whence is he towards whom Socrates points the attention of his pupil Alcibiades, as an illustration of the virtue he had fruitlessly inculcated? for whom, as a kindred, to superior spirit, Camillus, Cincinnatus, and Cato, seem to glow with welcome, and in presence of whose sublime simplicity, the Trajans, and the Antonines are hiding the vain ornaments which encircle their brows? Let us draw nearer to this pre-eminent object. As we approach, its recess enlarges, and clustering round the pedestal of the chief figure, are many who seem principally to delight in, and to boast of their association with him. Whence and who is he?—The world can answer. In the smooth abutment on which he stands, no one has thought it necessary to chisel his nativity or name. He is the one without parallel;—beyond all Grecian and all Roman fame:—never to be forgotten, never to be mistaken.

NEW-YORK TRAVELLER, SPIRIT OF THE TIMES, AND FAMILY JOURNAL.

THE DRAMA.

Park Theatre.

Mr. I. Mason took his benefit on Monday Evening on which occasion his gifted relatives lent him the assistance of their powerful names, and he had to return his thanks to them and to as full and fashionable a house as his most sanguine expectations could have pictured.

Black Hawk and his party attended the theatre on Tuesday and gazed from the side box on all the gaieties and gravities of the Evening with muscles as pliant as those of marble busts.

Mr. Barry took his Farewell Benefit on Wednesday and his bill presented almost as many stars, as are named in Keith's astronomy. At the end of the performances Mr. Barry was loudly called for, and took his leave of his old friends in New York amidst the most unequivocal testimonies of esteem and regret.

On Wednesday Evening the opera of "Fra Diavolo," was produced for the first time here, and if it be conceded that in matters of opera the first performance is only the last rehearsal, it went off pretty smoothly. But the allowance made in consideration of its being their first attempt, cannot of course extend to those with whom it should be familiar, and if the opera was rendered unnecessarily dull on its first night, and that should mar its future success, the blame must materially rest with those whose utter ignorance of even the words is not to be excused on any ground.

In the construction of this opera both author and composer must have had "the Brigand" in their mind's eye;—for the plot, situations and characters of both, bear a strong family resemblance.

The dramatic portion of an opera is usually a mere frame for hanging sheets of music on—but in this there are some very fair incidents, and many opportunities for good acting which might be much better used than they were.

Auber, is the original composer of the opera, and like a skilful author, no doubt had his reasons and object, for every piece of music, and even for its rotation, working up his effects to a certain given point:—and his plan is as much destroyed by any departure from it, as would an architect's if the pillars of his temple were made to surmount the roof, at the caprice of some "Committee of Taste." So has it pleased the tribe of arrangers and adapters—those false beacons that mislead, not guide him who expects they will light him on the way to sound musical taste,—to engraft on every Author's works the heterogeneous productions of other pens. And this Opera of "Fra Diavolo," shares the usual fate. Auber and Rossini are constrained into a forced partnership as composers, when their styles amalgamate about as well as water and mercury; and though the music may appear sweet to those who can dispense with the union of sense and sound, we cannot think for our own part that Auber's "Fra Diavolo" required to be stuffed with the stolen pieces of a dozen others, to render the work of so delightful a composer successful. It is all in bad taste, and we can never hope to be reputed a musical community, while we thus require to be gorged like children with sugar plums and sweetmeats. We did not note all the intruders, but among them were a duett from "Tancredi,"—an Aria from "Jean de Paris,"—an English ballad, a buffa aria from "La Gazza Ladra,"—and a bravura from "Robert le Diable." An agreeable medley no doubt, but no more constituting an Opera, than alternate scenes of Othello and the Gamester would improve one or the other.—Mr. Sinclair sang the music of "Fra Diavolo" with taste and skill, particularly his Barcarole "How gaily rows,"—and the Ballad of "Young Agnes,"—but in point of acting his Marquis and his Brigand were totally unlike what they were intended for. The author has made Lord Goslington a most Trollopian caricature, and Mr. Reynoldson heightened rather than diminished the coloring; he sang his music however with the skill and tact of a musician, particularly his Buffa Aria, "There was a time,"—a fact which some of the violinists seemed in considerable doubt about, and tried two or three till they got the right one. Mr. Richings looked "every inch" a Brigand and made a prominent figure of the little part of Beppo. Mrs. Austin was the Zerlina of the Opera, and accomplished the acting of a scene of extreme difficulty even to a practised actress, with much good taste and effect. Her singing the Cavatina "Day light I've has passed away," called forth an encore, but we think she would find it much more effective if sung in quicker time. Her song and prayer on retiring to rest were charmingly sung, but the second strain of the prayer should break from her lips, as if in her dream, when the Brigand's dagger is held above her, and cause him to drop his uplifted arm. Her Bravura "Hark! the Trumpet is calling," was sung in magnificent style, and assured us that a second hearing of it and the Opera, must improve the effect of both. The Military Chorus was very full and good, but we wonder where they learned that it is customary with soldiers to kneel and remove their caps at sound of the Vesper Bell. 'Tis true this is no fault of theirs, but of their director, who might easily learn that the soldiery neither do one or the other, even in Italy.

Mr. Jones's Benefit took place last night, when a young lady, who is a pupil of his, made her first appearance in an operatic part, though she some time ago appeared in the "Child of Nature,"—the performance trenched too much on our time of going to press to enable us to give any comments on the performance.

Mr. Blakely takes his Benefit on Thursday next, and we sincerely hope it will prove a Benefit to him,—his Bill of Fare promises a full equivalent for the price of admittance.

Bowery Theatre.

The old established pieces still attract good houses to this Theatre, and render novelties and critics equally unnecessary. The Indian Chiefs made this House their first place of theatrical Entertainment in this city. The centre Box was appropriated to them last Saturday which gave the audience an excellent opportunity to gaze their fill of admiration or astonishment.

Mr. Tuthill takes his Benefit on Wednesday and produces on the occasion an intensely interesting Drama called the Warden of Galway, founded on one of the exciting Legends of old Ireland.

Mr. G. Jones takes his on Friday, and appears as "Hofer, the Tell of the Tyrol" for the first time.

The Greenwich Savings Bank, incorporated at the last session of the Legislature, is to be opened at 10 Carmine street, on Monday the 1st of July. When it is considered that the "New York Bank for Savings," since its establishment in 1819, has transacted business with 35,000 individuals, and has received in deposit nearly $8,000,000 of which more than $2,500,000 now remain under its charge, invested in stocks and drawing an interest of about $125,000 per annum, and when it is further considered how much the population of the city, particularly in the upper wards, has increased since the date above mentioned,—there can be no doubt that the new institution, located as it is at least a mile and a half from the other, will be a great convenience to the public, and essentially increase the aggregate amount of deposits. We cannot too earnestly recommend to persons having small sums accruing from time to time which they do not particularly need, to avail themselves of the opportunities afforded by these institutions.

FIDGETS.

READER!—had you ever the Fidgets? you answer, Never,—recollect yourself. "Thank a' am," is the advice of one of the most eminent sages, and no one ever hurt himself by attending to the caution. Was you ever in love? (as who has not been) then you must have felt the Fidgets; did you ever hear a report that your Banker had stopped payment, when you had a considerable sum in his hands? or get a letter announcing a fall of 5 per Cent in the Stocks, just in time to be too late to withdraw an order you had sent to your attorney to sell out a few thousands? then you must have felt the Fidgets; if you still hold the negative, we give you up as impenetrable; you will certainly die in ossification of the heart.

Fidgets may be divided into two classes, general and particular; the latter we are all subject to experience at times; the former belong to a set of people distinguished for little else, than being particular without exactness, and cautious without prudence; they somewhat resemble the dog in the manger, keeping those around them uneasy, without benefitting themselves. Do you see that young lady, who is playing with the lapdog, and looking rather uneasy? she certainly has the Fidgets; see, her eye turns to the corner of the room; Ah! there's the cause, that handsome young fellow is paying some little attentions to a lady who sits there, not very particular indeed, but still sufficient to excite the Fidgets. Look out of the window; do you see that man in the rusty black coat buttoned up to his chin, who is standing on the opposite side of the street? he seems uncertain whether to stand still, advance, or go back; he is in the Fidgets till he knows what direction the person will take who is standing at No. 25; he is aware of owing him a certain amount of pounds, shillings, and pence, a demand for which would not be very agreeable in the present state of his affairs.

These, however, may be only symptoms of the particular Fidgets, and will disappear with the cause of their excitement; but your regular Fidget is never at rest, and seems almost to glory in an opportunity of being extraordinarily fidgetty, like John Bull, who is never comfortable unless he be grumbling. A fidgetty person cannot endure to see the fire stirred by any one but himself, and generally considers himself entitled to the dignity of "King of the Poker;" if he ever do delegate his authority, it is only to find fault with its execution; he is to a considerable extent, an "imitative animal," as no matter what be doing around him, he cannot be satisfied till he has "a finger in the pie."

Should he be obliged to make a short journey, he takes his seat a week before the day he intends to depart, is in fidgets the whole evening previous, that he may get to bed in time, for fear of oversleeping himself; gets up and disturbs the whole house about "three" in the morning, to his extreme anxiety to be ready for the coach, which starts at six precise; he is almost sure to cut himself while shaving, scald his mouth by taking his coffee too hot, or bespatter his best drab inexpressibles, by rising from table in such a hurry, as to overturn on them an egg, which he has been obliged to leave, (not being accustomed to eat raw ones,) and having ordered it up before it was warmed through; after all he gets to the coach-office a full half hour too soon.—Should he happen to be seated beside the driver, or guard, they are annoyed by repeated cautions or inquiries, as to the dangers of trotting down hill, turning a corner at full speed, or galloping over a level with a rise in front. Should it happen that he travels by a steamer, it is still worse, there is not only the danger of being drowned, but also of being blown up; when on deck, he takes his station by the pilot, at as great distance as possible from the engine, keeping a sharp eye on the funnel, as if he expected every instant to see it fly into the air; and he gets ten-fold more fidgetty, if the engineer should venture to diminish the pressure, and therefore permit an escape of steam. When he goes below, he perches himself in the farthest corner of the cabin, and, if you observe him attentively, you will remark, that for every shake which the machinery communicates to the vessel, his body gives a corresponding shudder; but, as a fidgetty man is never good company, we shall leave him to travel without further remark. If the man of fidgets is in business, and has property liable to fire or sea risks, he is obliged to insure it; but you may be sure he feels fidgetty on hearing that the consignment arrived safe, or, that the goods or property have been disposed of, without having incurred any damage, which may come within the range of his insurance; it grieves him to the heart to think he has paid the insurance for nothing. Is he advised by his friends to insure his life? he may do so, but every year's premium he pays he considers as so much money thrown away; one would be apt to think he had grown fidgetty at himself for living too long!

From the Philadelphia Gazette.

NOTES OF A TOUR.

PITTSBURG, June 1–23.

Gentlemen:—I witnessed that afternoon a terrible display of the fury of the enraged elements. It was an exhibition such as I never before saw, and such an one, as I pray Heaven I may never stand exposed to again. I will mention particulars:—

A party of gentlemen, filling three gigs, left this place this morning on a visit to Braddock's Fields, the scene of the dreadful slaughter of the English army by the Indians, in 1755. The spot is about nine miles from the city, on the banks of the Monongahela, and we reached it about noon. We spent about two hours in walking over the field of battle. A gentleman who resides in the neighborhood, very kindly pointed out to us the ambuscade, in which the Indians were hidden, the spot where Braddock fell, fatally wounded, the retreat of the army under the direction of Washington, who on that day, most gloriously signalized himself as an efficient officer, and indeed every other prominent part of the ground. We trod over these fields, now under cultivation, and flourishing with vegetation, and recalled to mind the events of that day. The furrows of the plough had turned up the bones of warriors, who had fallen dead on the field of glory. Remains of bones are still visible. In our rambles we picked up several pieces, as well as an arrow barbe, flints, musket balls, &c., which I have carefully preserved. On our return, the occurrence took place to which I have alluded above.

We had arrived within about two miles of the city, when we saw in the west symptoms of a coming storm. They were trifling, and we felt confident we could reach the city before the rain began. In this expectation we were disappointed; and before we had proceeded three hundred yards, thick black clouds suddenly enveloped us, rendering the atmosphere very dark. In an instant, a large tree on our right tumbled down with a tremendous crash, sending the limbs and fragments in every direction. It commenced hailing and blowing awfully. We saw ourselves in a tornado, and hastily jumped out of the gig. While endeavoring to keep up our horse, who was nearly thrown down by the wind, I lost my hat. I ran after it, but was blown violently against the fence on the opposite side of the road. Recovering myself, I again ran, but never shall I forget the sensations that passed through me. Tree after tree went down with a prodigious crash, literally filling the air with splinters and fragments,—the wind rushed and roared with a horrid noise,—the air was black with dust and the pelting of the hail, and the force of the wind rendered it impossible for me to keep my feet. On reaching my hat, I stumbled upon an elderly lady, who, with three children, one at the breast, had alighted from a wagon, the horses attached to which in their fright, had become unmanageable. A gentleman attached to our party seized one of the children, I another, and with the mother between us, we endeavored to make our way to a neighboring barn. This we reached, but we had no sooner entered the door, than a large part of the roof was blown entirely off, leaving us exposed to the most imminent danger.

This place we left instantly, and after immense labor, we made our way to an adjoining house, where we were gratified in depositing the children in safety. The lady was in great distress for her infant, that it being her firm belief, while exposed to the storm, that it had perished in her arms. When she found all safe, she sank down in a state of utter exhaustion.

The storm was not yet over, though its fury was mostly spent. While in this place of safety we witnessed more of its devastating effects—a new house within a hundred yards of our retreat, was blown down, an entire orchard was prostrated, and trees, fences, and out-buildings razed to the ground as if by magic. The scene was most dreadful.

Our party escaped with whole skins, but with little else. One of our gigs was whirled about in the air for some time, but was only triflingly injured. Our apparel was completely spoiled.

In the city the tornado was less terrible, but the storm of rain and hail was very severe. Great numbers of trees, awnings, light buildings, &c. were prostrated, but I have not learned that any lives were lost.

I had made arrangements for leaving this place to-night, but passing through this scene has unfitted me for a tour at this time. I shall therefore remain a day or two longer, to refit both in health and apparel.

PAGANINI.

That this prince of fiddle-players is rapacious and avaricious is generally known. A folio volume, however, would not suffice for the facts which have reached our knowledge in illustration of his character.

When Paganini first arrived in London, Signor Torri, who knew him only as a highly gifted countryman, offered his services as his homme d'affaires, and they were eagerly accepted. Torri had for months served him in this way with great zeal and fidelity, and without the least view to pecuniary compensation. When he was about to take his annual benefit concert, he was advised by his friends to request Paganini to play an air on this occasion, to which the Signor readily consented. A few days before that which was fixed for the concert, Torri's friends advised him to request Paganini to play two airs instead of one. He did so through a mutual friend, being almost afraid to make the application himself, as he anticipated a refusal. Paganini heard the request complacently, but immediately replied—"That won't do—Torri can't afford it. If I am to have two-thirds of his receipts for playing two airs, he will hardly have enough left to cover his expenses—no, let him be satisfied with one air, and with paying me one-third of the gross receipts of his benefit." "What," said the friend—"do you intend to charge him any thing?" "Certainly," replied Paganini, "Torri is a good fellow—but I cannot play for him for nothing." The concert took place, and Paganini's share of the receipts for performing one air was £97. Torri called upon him with the account, but at the same time presented him with a charge of £300 for his own services during several months, for which he would not have required a penny if Paganini had not been thus mercenary. "What," said the enraged fiddler—his eyes nearly starting from their sockets—"do you mean to rob me?—Three hundred pounds! Where am I to find such a sum,—it is out of the question." Torri persisted, and at length Paganini offered to give £50, desiring Torri to pay over the other forty-seven. Not a farthing less than £300 would Torri consent to take, and at length Paganini proposed to refer the dispute to arbitration. This proposal being accepted, De Begnis was appointed by Paganini, and Torri named another gentleman. An award was soon pronounced, for there could be no doubt of the reality of the services rendered by Torri. It was for £200 which Paganini, according to the terms of the award, was required to pay immediately. He refused, however, to pay a farthing, and went off to Ireland. On his return, Torri arrested him and got the money.

On the first settlement between Laporte and Paganini, the sum of £8000 was paid over to the Signor, being two-thirds of the gross receipts from the concerts at the King's Theatre, Mr. Laporte having only one-third, out of which he had to pay all the expenses. About £300 remained outstanding for the hire of private boxes. Paganini required £200 of this at once, although Laporte had not received, and might never receive it. "For charity's sake," said Paganini, "give me the money. I want to go out of town, and I am without a shilling." It was observed to him that he had on the preceding day received £8,000. This Paganini said was true, but he had paid it to the Sardinian Consul, who was to remit it to Genoa, and he was without money. Laporte would not yield the point; the fiddler roared and swore. He was in an extacy of grief—"For God's sake, for charity's sake," said he, "give me this money,"—but he entreated in vain, and he had, like Laporte, to wait until the money was collected.

THE DOG DANDIE.

Mr. M'Intire, patent mangle manufacturer, Regent bridge Edinburgh, has a dog of the Newfoundland breed, crossed with some other, named Dandie whose sagacious qualifications are truly astonishing and almost incredible. When Mr. M. is in company, however numerous soever it may be, if he but say to the dog, "Dandie, bring me my hat," he immediately picks out the hat from all the others, and puts it in his master's hands. A pack of cards being scattered in the room if his master had previously selected one of them, the dog will find it out and bring it to him. One evening, some gentlemen being in company, one of them accidentally dropped a shilling on the floor, which, after the most careful search, could not be found. Mr. M. seeing his dog sitting in a corner and looking as if unconscious of what was passing said to him "Dandie, find us the shilling, and you shall have a biscuit." The dog immediately jumped upon the table and laid down the shilling, which he had previously picked up without having been perceived. One time having been left in a room in the house of Mrs. Thompson, High street, he remained quiet for a considerable time but as no one opened the door, he became impatient, and rang the bell; and when the servant opened the door, she was surprised to find the dog pulling the bell-rope. Since that period, which was the first time he was observed to do it, he pulls the bell whenever he is desired; and what appears still more remarkable, if there is no bell-rope in the room, he will examine the table, and if he find a hand-bell he takes it in his mouth and rings it. Mr. M. having one evening supped with a friend, on his return home, as it was rather late, he found all the family in bed. He could not find his boot-jack in the place where it usually lay nor could he find it any where in the room after the strictest search.

He then said to his dog, "Dandie, I cannot find my boot-jack, search for it." The faithful animal, quite sensible of what had been said to him, scratched at the room door, which his master opened—Dandie proceeded to a distant part of the house and soon returned, carrying in his mouth the boot-jack, which Mr. M. now recollected to have left that morning under a sofa. A number of gentlemen, well acquainted with Dandie, are daily in the habit of giving him a penny, which he takes to a baker's shop, and purchases bread for himself. One of the gentlemen, who lives in James' square, when passing some time ago, was accosted by Dandie, in expectation of his usual present. Mr. T. then said to him, "I have not a penny with me to-day, but I have at home." Having returned to his house, some time after, he heard a noise at the door, which was opened by the servant, when in sprang Dandie to receive his penny. In a frolic Mr. T. gave him a bad one, when he as usual, carried it to a baker, and was refused his bread, as the money was bad. He immediately returned to Mr. T's, knocked at the door, and when the servant opened it, laid the penny down at her feet and walked off, seemingly with the greatest contempt. Although Dandie, in general, makes an immediate purchase of bread with the money he receives, yet the following circumstance clearly demonstrates that he possesses more prudent foresight than many who are reckoned rational beings.

One Sunday, when it was very unlikely that he could have received a present of money, Dandie was observed to bring home a loaf. Mr. M. being somewhat surprised at this, desired the servant to search the room to see if any money could be found. While she was engaged in this task, the dog seemed quite unconcerned till she approached the bed, when he ran to her, and gently drew her back from it. Mr. M. then secured the dog, which kept struggling and growling, while the servant went under the bed, where she found, seven-pence-half penny under a bit of cloth; but from that time he could never endure the girl, and was frequently observed to hide his money in a corner of a saw pit under the dust. And when Mr. M. has company, if he desires the dog to go with any of the gentlemen home, it will walk with him till he reach his home, and then return to his master, how great soever the distance may be.

Napoleon and Alexander.—The Emperor Alexander one day expressed to Duroc the intense desire he had to possess a pair of breeches of his great ally, the Emperor Napoleon. Duroc sounded his master on this very extraordinary subject. Napoleon laughed heartily. "Oh" cried he, donnez lui tout ce qu'il veut, pourvu qu'il me reste une paire pour changer." Alexander, who was very superstitious never wore any other breeches than Napoleon's in the field, during the campaigns of 1812-13.

An Impudent Quack.—A "professed bone setter" advertises in a Western paper that "his method of treating patients is so pleasant, and his success so certain, that many persons who have applied to him for relief, have afterwards dislocated and even broken their own limbs purposely, in order that they might enjoy the luxury of undergoing another operation at his hands!"—*U. What's in a name?—We see it stated that the brig Temperance has arrived at Campobello, from the West Indies, with a cargo of Rum.

There is a grape vine on the estate of Mr. Wilkes, at Oxford, (Md.) which bore in one season, (1831) 25,000 bunches of perfect grapes. This year there are 54,480 perfect bunches upon the same vine.

Classical Inscription.—A party of English sailors belonging to his Majesty's ship the Garland, when cruising off Cape Colonna, paid a visit to the temple of Minerva. For fun they had provided themselves with a tub of black paint, which they carried up to the Temple, and some of them having succeeded in climbing to the architrave, not only painted in large letters upon its whole length the name of their ship, but recorded an interesting occurrence, which marked the period of their visit, in the following truly original inscription:—"It rains like h—l!"

HAIR CUT—"A LA DOURO."

JOSEPH BARDOTTE most respectfully returns his sincere thanks to the citizens of New York for the flattering encouragement he has received since his arrival from Europe.

Ever anxious to introduce improvements which have been adopted in his profession, he takes this method to announce one, the most recently received from London.

The "Marquis Douro" son of the Duke of Wellington, having gone to a celebrated hair cutter in London, suggested an alteration in the manner of cutting hair, of such a decided advantage over the old mode, that it has been universally adopted by the fashionable world, and dubbed the "la Douro."

J. B. having engaged a superior workman from the above London establishment, has been enabled through him, to introduce this beautiful mode, and respectfully invites the fashionable to call and give it a trial at his rooms, 146 Broadway, up stairs, corner of Liberty-street, next door to Webb's Congress Hall.

N. B. The "La Douro" Metallic Wigs" made to order.

☞ Hair Dressers who wish to adopt the "La Douro" fashion will be taught in two lessons, at five dollars per lesson.

TRUSS COMMUNICATION.—The attention of those afflicted with Hernia is called to a new Truss lately patented in this city, and sold at No. 2 Ann street. Its superiority over every other instrument will be evident on a mere inspection, for unlike every other truss with which I am acquainted, the rupture-pad is pressed upon by a double spring, which is so fixed as to convey the necessary pressure to the lower part of the rupture-pad, thus keeping the pad closely applied in every attitude of body, and adjusting and adapting itself under all circumstances to the person and to the part to which it is to be applied. Possessing a double spring and consequently a double degree of elasticity, it is rendered easy and convenient to the wearer. j22

CHEAPEST PERIODICAL IN AMERICA.

FREEMAN HUNT is publishing in monthly parts, a reprint of the PENNY MAGAZINE, "Of the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge."

This unprecedentedly popular periodical was commenced in England, in 1832, and has been continued to the present period, increasing in favor and patronage. The London edition is published weekly, with occasional supplements. In the American edition the weekly numbers and the supplements will be so combined as to form a monthly part of between forty and fifty octavo pages. To those who are acquainted with the character of the work, any remarks from the publisher would be altogether superfluous, but for the information of those who are not, we deem it expedient to state a few facts, in relation to this little work, the sale of which has been justly regarded as one of the most remarkable indications of the extent to which the desire of knowledge has reached in Great Britain.

It was considered by Edmund Burke, some forty years ago, that there were eighty thousand readers in England. In the present year it has been shown by the sale of the "Penny Magazine," that there are two hundred thousand purchasers of one periodical work; and the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge, think it may be fairly calculated that the number of readers of that single work amounts to a million.

If this incontestible evidence of the spread of the ability to read be most satisfactory, it is still more satisfactory to consider the species of reading which has had such extensive and increasing popularity. In this work there has never been, a single sentence that would inflame a vicious appetite, and not a paragraph that could minister to prejudices and superstitions which a few years since were common. It has contained no excitements for the lovers of the marvellous—no tattle or abuse for the gratification of a diseased taste for personality, and above all no party politics. The subjects which have uniformly been treated, have been of the broadest and simplest character. Striking points of natural history—accounts of the great works of art in sculpture and painting—descriptions of such antiquities as possess historical interest—personal narratives of travellers—biographies of men who have had a permanent influence on the condition of the world—elementary principles of language and numbers—established facts in statistics and political economy—these and other subjects of interest, have supplied the materials for exciting the curiosity of a million of readers.

Besides furnishing the same amount of matter, and number of engravings, as are embraced in the British copy, a supplement will be added to each monthly part, with one or more illustrations of American scenery, or architecture.

The Magazine will appear monthly, containing at least forty imperial octavo pages. And each number illustrated with from twenty to thirty engravings on wood, designed to compare with the originals. Twelve parts, issued in the course of the year, will complete a volume of about five hundred imperial octavo pages, equal to one thousand of the ordinary size; including at least three hundred engraved illustrations of whatever is useful in science, splendid in art, or wonderful in nature.

☞ It will be printed on elegant paper and type. The price will be only 18 3-4 cents per part, or two dollars for the twelve, if paid in advance.

☞ Subscriptions received at Peabody & Co's, Broadway, and Wm Stodart's, Cortlandst. j8

VAUXHALL GARDEN is open for the season.—This delightful place, truly the only legitimate Garden in the city, is now ready to receive company. The proprietor has considerably added to the beauty and embellishments; the shades of the foliage is not equalled in the Union; a military band performs every evening; and on Sunday evenings will be performed, under the direction of Mr. PEARSON, selections of Music, from the works of Handel, Hayden, Mozart, &c.

Season Tickets may be had at the Garden. Single tickets, for a Gentleman 2 dollars—for a Gentleman and four Ladies, or Children with their parents or servant, 5 dollars. m25

COUGHS AND COLDS.—It is now about one year since the NEW ENGLAND COUGH SYRUP was first offered to the public, during which time several thousand bottles have been distributed throughout the United States and the British Provinces, and in all cases where the directions have been strictly followed by those who used it, the most salutary effects have been produced and it has uniformly proved itself to be a specific for Influenza, Coughs, Cold, Asthma, Whooping Cough, Spitting of Blood, and all affections of the lungs.

The proprietors are at liberty to refer to many individuals of the first respectability, who have been cured of obstinate coughs by its use, and the following letters received by them are added, for the perusal of those who may be troubled with similar complaints.

Gentlemen—After having tried by the recommendation of my friends, almost every medicine for a cough, without the least relief, I had recourse to your New England Cough Syrup, and am enabled to say, with much thankfulness, that it has cured me of one of the most obstinate coughs I ever knew, and shall feel it to be a duty to recommend it to every one whom I find in need of so valuable a medicine.

(Signed,)—Yours respectfully,

JOHN P. STEVENS.

The very great benefit that I have derived from the use of your Syrup has astonished me beyond measure. From the length of time that I had suffered from a most inveterate cough, I supposed I should never be rid of it while I lived. But by taking the bottle of Syrup which I procured from you, I have been perfectly cured, and now enjoy good health. Signed

STILLMAN ROBINSON.

Several Physicians have used the N. E. Cough Syrup in their practice. An order was received sometime since from a distinguished medical gentleman at the south. In a subsequent letter he remarks, "Your Cough Syrup is invaluable. It cured me entirely of Cough Syrup upon taking the 5th dose. Of the an inveterate cough upon taking the 5th dose. Of the dozen which I received from you, I gave away all but two bottles; one of the two I used in my own case, in part of it the other I have by me. In almost every case of those given away, the patients called and spoke of the astonishing effect of the remedy." The following note from a young gentleman of this city, was received a few days since.

It gives me great pleasure to be to able add my testimony in favor of your New England Cough Syrup, two bottles of which having entirely cured my cough which was so severe that my physician advised me to spend the coming winter in a southern climate, but the fortunate use of your Syrup will preclude the necessity. Boston, Sept. 1832.

Particular directions for use accompany each bottle.

FEMALE COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE AT BELLEVILLE, New Jersey.—The system of instruction pursued at this Seminary, embraces a thorough course of English and Classical reading, with the different branches of the sciences, requisite to the attainment of a liberal and finished education.

While the most rigid attention will be devoted to the inculcation of correct habits, both mental and personal, it will also be the earnest aim of the Principals, both by precept and example, to promote in their pupils the knowledge and practice of their duties, moral, social, and religious.

It is believed that few places are better adapted for a respectable boarding school, than the village of Belleville. Situated on the banks of the Passaic, about 9 miles from the city of New York, containing a number of families of the first respectability, and possessing three places of worship, of the Episcopal, Reformed Dutch, and Methodist denominations, it combines the social advantages and public worship, and intercourse of a high character, and a situation uncommonly picturesque and salubrious.

POWELL'S BALSAM OF ANNISEED,
FOR COUGHS, SHORTNESS OF BREATH, ASTHMAS, &c.

UNDER the immediate patronage of several of the most distinguished Nobility and Gentry in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, Scotland and Ireland, in bottles at 30 and 60 cents each.

This invaluable Medicine has the extraordinary property of immediately relieving coughs, colds, hoarseness, difficulty of breathing, and huskiness in the throat. It operates by dissolving the congealed Phlegm, consequently causing a free expectoration. Those who are troubled with tickling in the throat which deprives them of rest night after night, by the incessant cough which it provokes, will, by taking one dose, find immediate relief, and one bottle in most cases will effect a cure. Numerous cases have come to the Proprietor's knowledge, where young people have been troubled with Coughs spitting of Blood, and gradual wasting away, with every appearance of going into a decline, who, by taking two or three bottles, have been entirely cured. In Asthmas, chronic coughs, difficulty in breathing, &c., no pen can describe the wonders that have been performed by this invaluable medicine. Many, who for years have been unable to lie down in their beds without a danger of being choked by an accumulation of phlegm (which invariably causes a dreadful cough;) others, who with difficulty could breathe at all in a recumbent posture, have, by taking ONE DOSE of this excellent BALSAM, been enabled to lie down comfortably in their beds. But the testimonials of those who have experienced its wonderful effects will do more to recommend and insure it the support of the public, than any thing the proprietor can say in its favor, and by particular request he has published the following:—

Extract of a letter forwarded by James Fair, Esq. of Lastruther, Roxburghshire, to Mr. Renwick, of Jedburg who forwarded it to Mr. Powell.

"Dear Sir, Lastruther, 18th of January, 1830.

"You know that I was sceptical with regard to the wonders performed by the administration of Patent Medicines to the numerous complaints of 'afflicted patients.' I have now altered my opinion, at least in so far as to the effect produced on me by two doses of 'Powell's Balsam of Aniseed.' In fact it was quite magical! Having been for some time afflicted and tormented with what is termed a 'stomach cough.' I took one tea-spoon-ful of the bottle sent me, mixed with a wine glass-ful of cold water, in the morning, and the same in the evening, on stepping into bed; and although prevented from sleeping the whole of the previous night, I found myself entirely cured, not having even coughed from that time to this, a period of at least a week! had one of the 'Seraphic Choir' descended from Heaven and said, 'be ye whole,' the effect produced could not have been more immediate or effectual.

"You are at liberty to make what use you may think proper of this letter, for its contents are no less true than wonderful."

Prepared and sold by
THOMAS POWELL, Black Friars road, London:
And sold only in New York at his Store, 8 Arcade.

A large supply has just been received from London, and which can be forwarded in any quantity, to any part of the United States, on a remittance being forwarded per post. jan 12

ORRIS TOOTH WASH.—This is by far the most pleasant and effectual remedy ever yet discovered for diseased teeth, spongy gums, and unpleasant odour of the breath.

The valuable recommendations obtained from Dentists, the most eminent in their profession, is sufficient evidence of its inestimable worth. Being composed of substances innocent in their operation, it is impossible that any injurious effects can follow its use. It is designed to be used with a brush, and will be found preferable to a powder. It produces a beautiful whiteness on the teeth, and by its astringent qualities prevents the gums becoming spongy, and the teeth loose. It has been found very serviceable to use the wash at night, just before going to rest. This method is recommended by physicians and dentists, as all particles of food which might accumulate during the day are removed, and the mouth kept through the night, in a clean, sweet, and healthy state.

That the public may know the estimation in which the Orris Tooth Wash is held by those who are the best judges, certificates have been obtained from the following medical gentlemen, and accompany each bottle:—Dr. John Randall, Dr. Walter Channing, Dr. T. W. Parsons, Dr. A. J. Davenport, Boston; Dr. Nathaniel Peabody, Salem; Dr. Edwin Parsons, Dr. W. K. Brown, Portland; Dr. F. J. Higginson, Cambridge; Dr. Dudley Smith, Lowell; and the following note has been received from Mr. Parmly, surgeon dentist of this city.

"I have used the 'Orris Tooth Wash,' and having been made acquainted with the various articles of which it is composed, feel great pleasure in recommending it as an agreeable, wholesome and efficient wash for the mouth.

Signed

ELEAZAR PARMLY.

OBLIQUE PENS.—A fresh supply, just received, for sale by j8 3t BUSSING & CO. 70 William-st. N. York.

OLD GALEN'S HEAD DISPENSARY, No. 14 Peck Slip, corner of Water street.—DR. EVANS continues his improved practice as usual, at his well established Dispensary, No. 14 Peck slip. The public are respectfully apprised, that Dr. Evans being regularly educated in the city of London, has been a member of said faculty 37 years—has had 12 years hospital practice and is well known as a practitioner in this city for the last 16 years. The great success attending Dr. E's practice in all delicate diseases viz. Syphilis, gonorrhœa, gleets, strictures, &c. induce ignorant pretenders to copy after him. Many valuable members of society are daily falling sacrifices to the artful baits held out by those unprincipled experimentalists. Strangers are particularly cautioned not to be deceived by ing nious puffing advertisements of any description, but call and judge for themselves.

Also, to be had at the above Dispensary, Minerva's Box, containing a complete plan of medicine for the cure of a certain disease, with a small book of directions, in which the symptoms and treatment of the diseases are pointed out with such brevity and accuracy that every person may in this case become his own physician.

Also, a preventive for the above, if used in due time. N. B. The offices and entrances are well arranged, and secrecy may be depended on. mch 23

H. HOWELL & CO. 40 Canal-street, near Broadway, New-York, Manufacturer of Paste and Liquid Blacking, of a superior quality, warranted not to injure the Leather, which they offer upon the most liberal terms.

☞ H. H. & Co., pledge themselves to give the utmost satisfaction, and should the article not prove as good as is warranted, the purchaser is at liberty to return and receive the cash for the same.

Also,—Black and Red Ink of the first quality, and furnished by the wholesale. j8

PEALE'S MUSEUM
AND GALLERY OF THE FINE ARTS.
BROADWAY, OPPOSITE THE CITY HALL.

VENTRILOQUISM.—The satisfaction which the visitors of the Museum derived from the performances of the celebrated Ventriloquist, Mr. HARRINGTON, of Boston, on his visit to this city, a few weeks ago, has induced the proprietor to enter into another engagement with him, and the public are respectfully informed that he will exhibit his wonderful powers of Ventriloquism, and perform his feats in Legerdemain every evening until farther notice.

He will hold a conversation with a supposed person under the floor, and apparently bring him up into a small box, and again he will appear to pass down into the cellar to a great distance; throw his voice into various parts of the room, or into the body of any of the visitors, and will imitate the Chicken, Mocking Bird, Bumble Bee, Cat, and Killing a Pig, &c.

Among numerous other wonderful feats in Legerdemain, he will cause various objects apparently to pass through the table, plate and cloth, and produce curious changes. He will make an Egg dance a Hornpipe and creep about him; make an Egg appear and disappear at pleasure; make money pass along a ribbon form a box, although locked up. He will introduce the Coffer of Mahomet, or a glove turned into a live bird; do wonders with gold rings, handkerchiefs, money, eggs, cards, cups and balls. He will suffer a loaded pistol to be fired at him, and catch the ball in his fingers; and will introduce the wonderful ribbon factory, which has astonished many Philosophers; he will also introduce his curious sheet of paper, which he will fold into the greatest variety of shapes imaginable, &c. &c.

This Exhibition is conducted without any confederate whatever.

THE EGYPTIAN MUMMY, supposed to be upwards of Three Thousand years old, one of the greatest curiosities in the collection.

HEAD OF A NEW ZEALAND CHIEF, beautifully tattooed and embalmed, this is also a great curiosity.

The Museum occupies, for its Natural History Department and Miscellaneous Curiosities, two spacious apartments, each 100 feet in length—an extensive Gallery of Paintings, by eminent artists, including upwards of 150 Portraits of celebrated characters, a Portrait of Napoleon, by Le Fevre, &c. &c.; and a Lecture Room, in which, during the Evening, various Exhibitions take place.

In the Upper Rooms is a large and splendid COSMORAMA, showing the Spanish Inquisition, Belshazzar's Feast, and a great variety of Interesting Views.

Admittance 25 cents, Children under 12 years of age, half price. m18

GOLDEN DIAPHORETIC TINCTURE, FOR RHEUMATISM.—This Medicine having been used in their practice by a number of Medical gentlemen of this city, of the highest standing, for this disease and all others (which depend on like causes) is now offered to the public in the full belief that it is superior to any article in the whole compass of medicine. It effects a cure without nausea or irritation, and has never failed to relieve or cure when the directions have been strictly attended to. It is not our intention to weary the reader by speaking of the virtues of a medicine which need only be used to prove it is not the intention of the subscribers to deceive. The following extract is from the work of a medical gentleman whose reputation stands as fair as any in America:—

"Of all the Diaphoretic Medicines I have used, the most powerful is a preparation prepared at the N. E. corner of Sixth and Race streets, Philadelphia, by E. Evans. The preparation is but little known, although from what I have frequently witnessed of its effects, I am fully satisfied that it is a 'peculiarly valuable remedy.' JOHN EBERLE, M. D.

Professor of Materia Medica and Botany, in the Ohio Medical College."

The following highly respectable Surgeon of this city has used and is willing to testify that it is a superior medicine. GEORGE McCLELLAN, M. D.

Professor of Surgery in the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia.

Another well known medical gentleman who has used it with entire success, kindly consents to give his name for reference.

GEORGE W. RITER, M. D.

The following gentleman informs me that he has succeeded in every Rheumatic case.

M. M. LEVIS, M. D.

I have used the Diaphoretic Tinture, sold by J. W. Burns & Co. and am prepared to say that I have always succeeded in curing Rheumatism and fevers generally with it. THOMAS E. WARE, M. D.

CERTIFICATES.

I have been long afflicted with Rheumatism, and had almost despaired ever recovering; I could not move; in a word, I was as helpless as an infant. Dr. Eberle was called in and prescribed the Diaphoretic Tincture; I took it regularly, and from that moment began to recover. I am now well, and have had no return of this most acute disease. This certificate I give with pleasure, for I hope sincerely that it may become generally known that there is a cure for Rheumatism. JACOB KEYSER,

Residence No. 8 Market street, Philadelphia.

Until I used the Golden Diaphoretic Tincture, I supposed the Rheumatism incurable; I have recovered and again enjoy good health.

WM. HOFER, Harr'sburg, Pa.

Other respectable certificates could be furnished but we deem it folly, as every one can be satified by referring to the above respectable persons, or at the Medicinal Store, N. E. corner of Sixth and Race sts.

☞ The Golden Diaphoretic Tincture, sold only by J. W. BURNS & CO. N. E. corner of Sixth and Race sts. Philad; and E. A. McCLEAN, 235 Greenwich st. corner of Robinson, New York. m25

CANCER.—I, the subscriber, do hereby certify that my revered mother, Mrs Hannah Welch, aged 87, and residing in the town of Jackson, in the county of Washington, was grievously afflicted with a cancer. In January last, she employed an eminent physician, and he pronounced it to be a rose cancer. He applied two plasters a day for several months, which were attended with excruciating pain, and produced no good effect. In the month of May last, I called to see my mother, and found her in a dangerous situation, and knowing that Dr. P. Davison, of Albany, who resides at No. 670 S. Market st. was skilled in cancerous complaints, I advised her to come to Albany and place herself under Dr. Davison's care; and she came to my house. He applied one of his plasters for about 8 or 10 days which removed the rose cancer, and in three weeks the cure was completed. My mother stated that she suffered more pain with one plaster of her first doctor than she did through all the attendance of Dr. Davison, who effected the cure in so short a time. I further state, that Jirah Baker, Esq. of Hoosick, was cured of a rose cancer at my house in 1821, and still remains well. This I publish at my own expense, in this paper, for the benefit of mankind; and hoping that editors will, from the same motive, notice it in their papers. Albany, September 1, 1830.

J. CROSS.
Opposite the Rail Road Stage office, and near the Steam Boat Landing. m11

NIBLO'S HOTEL,
No. 112 Broadway, between Pine and Cedar streets, New York.

THE subscriber returns his grateful acknowledgments to his friends and the public for the liberal support afforded him since his establishment in this city. Having found, however, that the name of his Hotel, which he originally adopted, (Congress Hall,) subjects him to many inconveniences in consequence of the proprietor of a public establishment in the immediate vicinity having assumed the same title, and being unwilling by a continuance of the present name of his house, to embarrass his neighbor as well as himself, he has resolved on changing the same to that of NIBLO'S HOTEL, hoping under this new title to merit a continuance of public patronage. No situation in this city can present more advantages to permanent and transient guests than Niblo's Hotel. Its central location, being near the principal places of amusement and its vicinity to the public offices and business part of the town, renders it a most desirable resort for families and gentlemen engaged in commercial and other pursuits.
The experience which the subscriber has acquired as proprietor, for many years, of that extensive establishment at the Exchange Hotel, in Petersburg, Virginia, and subsequent as an associate with Mr. Holkill of the City Hotel, Philadelphia, will, he trusts, prove a sufficient guarantee to all who may honor him with their patronage, that nothing shall be wanting on his part, or by those in his employ, to contribute in every respect to their accommodation and comfort. dec 22

CLINTON LUNCH,
Corner of Liberty street and Broadway.
THE proprietors of this establishment, which has been opened since May last, in consequence of the unparalleled support they have received, are induced to come before the public with their thanks for the liberal patronage bestowed on them, and to assure them that instead of relaxing in their exertions to please, (which is too much the case with many who undertake to conduct similar establishments,) they are stimulated to increased exertions, if possible, and determined to preserve in the same straight forward path in which they have commenced, hoping thereby to deserve a continuance of that support they have hitherto so liberally been favored with. The undersigned being averse to all kinds of common-place puffing, have been determined that this establishment should rise or fall by its own merits or demerits; and as they have now been six months fairly before the public, and that public having continued daily to increase its patronage, they are justified in presuming that the course they have pursued in conducting this establishment has been generally approved, and as a proof of their determination to spare no pains or expense in improving and enlarging the same from time to time, as circumstances may require, for the public accommodation, they have now to announce that they have, at a very considerable expense, fitted up and handsomely furnished an extra Dining Room on the first floor, which was opened to the public on the 8th instant, the entrance to which is from No. 73 Liberty street. The proprietors will now be enabled to get up Dinners and Suppers for private parties, of all the delicacies of the season, in a style equal to any establishment in the city, at the shortest notice. Their Wines and Liquors will as usual continue to be chosen from the oldest and most choice stocks in the city, and the personal exertions of the proprietors will be continued, and their best efforts exercised to please and to deserve public patronage. The Ordinary, as usual, will be conducted on the most liberal principles. Hot Coffee and Tea at all hours from 7 in the morning till 12 at night. Oysters of the best quality, in all their varieties, and Soups of every description at all times.
nov 10 GOOLD & ATKINS.

TAMMANY HALL,
Opposite the City Hall, New York.
THIS Establishment has been fitted up in as good a style as any House of its class in the vicinity, and is furnished throughout in a good style, for the accommodation of the public on the following plan.
Gentlemen can take their lodgings by the single night or by the week, as they please without any reference to Board, if he wishes refreshments he can have them at any time he pleases and what he pleases to select from the Bill of Fare, which will hang in the refectory or Bar Room with the prices of every article attached thereto. In the Basement Story is the Refectory, where Refreshments of most every kind may be had on the most reasonable terms, and in handsome style at a minutes notice, from Sun rise until 12 o'clock at night. On the 2d Floor is the Bar and Reading Room.
The Lodgings are cool and comfortable being in the most healthy and pleasant part of the city, overlooking the Park and fronting on the City Hall. Clubs, Dining and Supper parties can be accommodated on the most reasonable terms. The Bar is stocked with the choicest of Liquors and Wines, and the Larder furnished with the best the market affords, and no pains or expense will be spared by the proprietors to make this establishment a comfortable retreat for all those who will honor them with their patronage. Price of lodgings, Per week, $2,00, 3 nights, $1,00, single night 37 1-2 cents. mar 1 tf

LINE OF OMNIBUSES
From Twelfth street to Wall street.
ROSWELL BEACH, has purchased this Line throughout, and having added, as an Extra, the beautiful little carriage "Tom Thumb," has determined to start, alternately every fifteen minutes, the following splendid Stages, viz. the Benjamin Franklin, Paragon, Veteran, Albion, and Tom Thumb, which are not surpassed in convenience or beauty by any in the city. The horses have been procured at great expense, and are kept in the best condition for "the track." The Line being now in first rate order, the Proprietor hopes, by the regularity of starting, the excellence of his Horses, and the civility of his Drivers, to deserve the patronage of those whose convenience will be facilitated by the above arrangement, and of the citizens of New York generally.
N. B. Some dissatisfaction having been expressed by the holders of tickets, which were purchased from the former owner of this line, the present Proprietor begs leave to state, that when he purchased the line of coaches, he did not obligate himself to redeem any Tickets which might have been sold by the former Proprietor, previous to his purchase, and furthermore, that as he has received no cash, Tickets [illegible] of course a dead loss. He trusts therefore it will not be considered illiberal in him, that he declines redeeming Tickets for which he has not received one cent, and which he never obligated himself to redeem, and which if he should redeem, would involve him in an expense greater than the undertaking under any circumstances would warrant.

NO MONOPOLY ! ! !
PEOPLE'S LINE FOR PHILADELPHIA,
Via New Brunswick, Princeton and Trenton.
The steamboat NEW YORK, Capt. J. Vanpelt, leaves Pier No. 2, North River, foot of Morris st. near the battery, daily, Sundays excepted, at 6 o'clock in the morning, for N. Brunswick, where passengers will take Reeside's splendid Troy-built coaches and proceed through Princeton to Trenton, from thence take the steamboat PHILADELPHIA, Capt. [illegible] Davis, and arrive at Philadelphia early the same afternoon. Fare through $2 50.
To Perth Amboy and New Brunswick 12 1-2 cts.—To Trenton $1 50—Breakfast on board 37 1-2 cts.
The proprietors of the People's Line rely on the generous public, in sustaining them against a relentless monopoly, whose wish and interest it is to put down all competition, to enable them to charge the highest prices they can; which they will do if there is no rival line to oppose them. A fair and honorable competition, with a choice of conveyance, is always an advantage to the public.
For the accommodation of travellers and safety of their baggage, the same coaches run through from boat to boat, without the inconvenience of changing on the road.
N. B. Passengers who take this line avoid the great danger and inconvenience which they are subjected to in travelling on crooked Rail Roads, so often experienced in consequence of the cars getting off the tracks at the curves and turnouts, and thereby liable to upset.
The Baltimore People's Line Boat leaves Philadelphia daily at 6 o'clock A. M., from the same wharf which this Line lands at. Fare $2.
For Seats apply to THOMAS WHITFIELD, old No. 1 Courtlandt street, and at the People's Line Office 31 Washington street, opposite the wharf, or on board the boat.
All Specie, Goods, Baggage, &c. at the risk of the owners thereof.
WM. B. JAQUES, Agent, for tf J. REESIDE & CO. Proprietors.

BOSTON AND PROVIDENCE.
TREMONT MAIL STAGES.
Leaves Boston every morning at 5, and Providence at 6 o'clock.
Also, Steam Boat Mail leaves Providence every day, on the arrival of the boats, and arrives in Boston from one to three hours in advance of the principal part of the Stages of the Citizens line.
For Seats or Extra Coaches in Boston, apply at City Tavern, Brattle-street and Washington Coffee House, 188 Washington street. In Providence, at Tremont Stage Office, corner of Market square and South Main street, and to the Agent on board of the Boats on their arrival. All Baggage and Freight is at the risk of the owner thereof. Passengers wishing to travel by this line will please not to pay their stage fare on board the Boats. C. B. WILDER, Agent.
N. B. It will be seen by reference to several papers of the city, that the Citizens Stage Company have broken out with new advertisements, purporting to be that they were running the only Stages from this City to Providence, to connect with the Boats; evidently designed to raise the impression in this, that the Tremont Mail Stage Company had been beaten off the route—which had reinstated them in the full possession of the whole Line, and given them another opportunity to monopolise and impose upon passengers, as has been their custom at all times, when a good wholesome opposition has not kept them within proper bounds.
As they have practised such a course of deception upon us so long, we pay no regard to such foul tongued impositions, other than to say that we have made very large additions to our former stock, which enables us to run more regular, and with much better Stock and Coaches, and in less time, from the Boats, on at every, than any other line on the route. tall

NEW-HAVEN & HARTFORD
STEAMBOAT LINE.
Daily, Sundays excepted. Passage from New-York to Hartford, including stage fare, $3. To New-Haven, $2.
The steamboat SUPERIOR Capt. Sanford, and the new steamboat SPLENDID, Capt. Bucher, will on Tuesday the 28th inst. commence a daily line and run as follows:—From the steamboat place, foot of Beekman-street. The Superior will leave every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday morning at 7 o'clock. The Splendid, every Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning at the same hour. Returning will leave New-Haven on the alternate day at 12 o'clock, noon.
The Superior is well known to the travelling public, and needs no commendation; no pains nor expense have been spared in the construction of the Splendid to render her in every respect a first rate boat. It is expected she will equal the Superior in speed and in other respects it is hoped she will be thought worthy of her name. The Captain and Agent will not be wanting in their exertions to promote the comfort and safety of passengers.
Excellent Post Coaches and horses are always ready on arrival of the Boat at New-Haven, to convey passengers to Hartford, Providence, and Boston. s30

WINTER ARRANGEMENTS
For Boston and Providence, via New London.
The steamboat GENERAL JACKSON, Capt. D. Havens, will leave the East River steamboat place foot of Beekman street, on Friday afternoon, at 4 o'clock.

New Inventions.

ROGGER'S PATENT
Newly invented and Highly Improved Balance FIRE ENGINE.
JOHN F. ROGERS & CO. are manufacturing, at Waterford, Saratoga county, N. Y., on an extensive scale, Rogers' Patent Balance Fire Engine, and the Company do not hesitate to recommend it to the public as decidedly superior to any Fire Engine now known. It has been tested by skilful Engineers at the United States Arsenals at Gibbonsville and Washington, and [illegible] to all others. The Government Arsenal at Washington is now supplied with one of the said Engines, and the Proprietor has on hand a contract with the Government for the supply of all their principal Arsenals. This Engine combines the advantage of more power at less cost than any other in use, and needs only to be examined to ensure it a preference to all others. Engines will be made promptly to order, of such dimensions and power as shall be required, at [illegible] prices. june 20

AN ELEGANT ARTICLE.
ECONOMY and Luxury combined in JOHNSON'S PATENT SOFA BEDSTEAD.—The Subscriber takes this method to return his grateful acknowledgments for the very liberal patronage extended to him the last season, and again begs leave to call the attention of the public to his Patent Sofa and Settee Bedstead. This article is essentially different from any previous attempt to combine the Bedstead with the Sofa or Settee. It is constructed on principles peculiar to itself: with the size, strength, and convenience of the ordinary four post Bedstead, it possesses the symmetry, beauty, and finish, of the ornamental Parlour Settee or Sofa. The bed and bedding are enclosed, and again extended with the greatest ease, and without removing them from their place on the casing. To private gentlemen, or families boarding, they save the expense of an extra room. To invalids, and those who would enjoy the luxury of sleeping by a parlour fire; to boarding house keepers, to masters of vessels, to the owners of counting-rooms, &c. they are perfectly invaluable. The extraordinary demand for the Patent Sofa Bedstead is the best evidence of its utility. Upwards of seven Hundred of them have been manufactured by the Patentee within a short period, their value at a fair estimate, being sixty Thousand Dollars. These Bedsteads are adapted to any climate, and may be transported to a trifling expense. The Proprietor warrants the Sofa Bedstead to fully answer the description which has been given of its merits; and, from his long experience in this particular line of business, all attempts at imitation on the part of Pretenders, may be regarded as impositions, and, as such, ought to be guarded against by the community.
N. B. The Patentee now offers for Sale, Patent Rights to applicants in any part of the United States. The Subscriber is constantly on hand, at his Ware Room and Factory,

TO FAMILIES AND GROCERS.
PATENT MOULD CANDLES.
THE candles are peculiarly adapted for summer use, and will remain hard in the warmest climate. They are particularly recommended to Families, not only for economy, but cleanliness, as they will burn longer than the Sperm, and do not produce a cup around the wick to retain any of the melted tallow,—which in the sperm and the ordinary tallow candle is so liable to spill when moved. Manufactured and for sale only by W. BULL & SON, No. 189 Front st.

BENJAMIN'S PRACTICE OF ARCHITECTURE.—Containing the five orders of architecture and an additional column and entablature, with all their Elements and Details explained and illustrated, for the use of Carpenters and practical men. With sixty plates.
By Asher Benjamin, Architect, author of "The American Builder's Companion," "The Rudiments of Architecture," and "The Practical House Carpenter."
"This is an entirely new work, separate and distinct from any former productions of the same author, containing new examples and illustrations which cannot be found elsewhere.
It contains not only the Orders of Architecture, with all their details, but every subject of Common Practice with the Carpenter, or who is employed in the Ornamental part of building, is carefully explained for the use of those who have not had an opportunity of studying the abstract principles of the science.
The work is an attempt as far as the author is able to reduce Architecture to the level of Carpentry, and to produce as intimate a connexion, in practice, between these important arts, and it is to be hoped it will be peculiarly adapted to the wants of Carpenters in this country."
Published and for sale by CARTER, HENDEE & CO. Boston, and for sale by the Booksellers in New York. jl

DR. DE GOURGUE'S PATENT SPECIFIC.
THIS medicine has been used with great success as thousands can testify. In all rheumatic affections whether acute or chronic, it has decided superiority by affording almost immediate relief it has been successfully tested. For the following complaints it will be found very efficacious, viz. Quinsey sore throat, Hives in children, Pain in the back and Sciatica, Bruises and Sprains, Chapped hands, violent contusions, Fresh wounds, Burns and Scalds, Head and Tooth ache, Debility of the system. Prevents the eye from turning black if immediately applied; is excellent for washing the teeth and gums, &c. &c. The specific has been administered with surprising success, in cases of flatulency, pain in the stomach, bowels, dysentery, &c.
The most inveterate Piles has been thoroughly cured by it. A Fistula, which in most cases proves fatal, yielded to the specific. The above medicine is held in such high estimation by many families that they are unwilling to be without it a moment.
Prepared and sold until further notice, ONLY at the south east corner of the Bowery and 8th street, 24 corner above Vauxhall Garden.
The extensive demand manifested for the genuine D. Gourgue's Specific, has induced several to endeavor to deceive the public by persuading them to purchase a counterfeit medicine. No person except the proprietor in the city of New York is authorised to vend De Gourgue's Specific, and it can be obtained at no other place than the above, where it is prepared, and which may be known by the sign over the door. Each bottle is accompanied with printed directions, sealed with the initials D. G. on the cork, NONE OTHER IS GENUINE. Retail price 50 cents per bottle; wholesale $1 50 per dozen.
Directions.—Shake the bottle and apply the Specific with friction to the affected parts. In fevers rub well the small of the back. For Hives in children apply it freely to the chest. For Convulsions, by rubbing the back and stomach, its effects are almost instantaneous. For the Headache apply it to the back of the neck and soles of the feet. For chilblains or frosted feet, rub them twice a day, or oftener. From 20 drops to a tea-spoon full may be taken inwardly, mixed with water.
A selection of certificates from numerous respectable individuals is annexed, to give the public some idea of the value of the above medicine.
This is to certify that I have used "De Gourgue's Specific," and the most beneficial result has been the consequence. For the last twenty years I have been afflicted with the rheumatism, and suffered to that degree, that I never went without a cane or a strengthening plaster. By bathing with the Specific the pain is removed. I can walk without a cane, and have no occasion for a strengthening plaster; the great relief I have obtained, I attribute under providence to the Specific. It gives me great satisfaction, therefore, to recommend it to my fellow citizens.
(Signed) THOMAS CRUMDWELL, 309 Bowery.
New York, 21 February, 1832.
This is to certify that I have used "De Gourgue's Specific," to my entire satisfaction, and I do not hesitate to give my unqualified approbation in favor of the same. By the use of less than one oz., in three weeks time, my hand, which was badly torn to pieces with the loss of one finger, by the accidental discharge of a gun, was completely healed. I have also known others to use it with like success.
Signed EDWARD CONLEY, Blackwell's Island.
New York, July 3, 1832.
I have been in the habit of using "De Gourgue's Specific" for several years, and do not hesitate to give it the highest recommendation, having used it most plentifully and always found the greatest benefit from it.
(Signed) JOSEPH GANOUNG, 59 Carmine street.
New York, 12th Dec. 1831.
I certify, that having made use of "De Gourgue's Patent Specific" for myself and family, occasionally for more than two years, I do not hesitate to recommend it to my friends for the cure of every complaint, and more than are named in the directions accompanying each phial. WM. D. DISEROW,
New York, Aug. 2, 1832. Bowery, near Fifth st.
I have great satisfaction in recommending "De Gourgue's Patent Specific," considering it a very valuable medicine, having been in the habit of using it for the last three years. In a severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism, which deprived me of the use of my limbs, so much so that I could not put my foot to the floor or raise my arms,—I was induced to try the Specific, and was so much relieved that the next day I was enabled to walk freely, and speedily recovered, from the use of one bottle. I have also used it with the greatest efficacy for burns, bruises, wounds, &c in my family. ELIZA BROOKS,
Jan. 23, 1832. Corner 1st Avenue and 10th st.
I was badly afflicted with a violent and continual pain in my breast, for about nine years; the last two or three years it was extremely bad. I had consulted five or six different physicians, and tried various remedies. Every thing, however, failed to give me relief, until I fortunately used "De Gourgue's Specific," which, I am happy to state, perfectly cured me in a short time. I keep the medicine constantly in my family, and use it for various purposes, and recommend it highly to all families.

STOUGHTON COLLECTION CHURCH MUSIC.
JUST published by MARSH, CAPEN & LYON, Washington street, Boston, and Concord, N. H. a second edition, enlarged and improved. This work was arranged by the Stoughton Musical Society. It has been improved and stereotyped, and the publishers have spared no pains or expense in rendering it worthy of extensive patronage. It is printed on good fine paper of good quality, and strongly bound. The Types is of Leabitt's construction, New-York, and for beauty and distinctness, is superior to any thing of the kind ever produced in this country. A writer in a Boston Journal, gives the following reasons for his partiality to the work. Without further recommendation, we shall give our reasons why we adopted a signature as a true friend to the Stoughton Collection of Church Music.
1st. Because it afforded that variety of music calculated to please and beautifully to effect the people of this country. 2d, because it has reinstated many of the old American tunes of great merit, in their proper rank—which before were the same as lost to the world—being out of print. 3d. Because it is compiled with strict reference to the wants of the whole community, and not particular to one class, to the exclusion of others. 4th because the alterations in the old tunes are strictly in unison with our cherished recollections, and the established habits and manners of a large portion of our singers. 5th, because the arrangement is in no manner unchanged—antic [illegible] and a different taste prevails among the people. 6th, because by the performance of its pieces, the objects and ends are fully answered. "BOUNCING DEER" IN THE "AMERICAN BOTTOM."
Mr. Editor,—Your readers have probably heard or read of the "American Bottom"—a large tract of rich and fertile land, in the great valley of the Mississippi. If not, they are now to learn that it is situate on the Mississippi river, between the mouths of the Illinois and Ohio rivers, north and south, and extending from the left bank eastward, to the hills and bluffs, which seem to have been the eastern boundary of the "great estuary"—so called by a modern speculatist; or, at any rate, the eastern termination of what may be said to be the natural bed of that river.
It has been discovered that the deer resort in great numbers to a place immediately opposite to, and about three miles distant from St. Louis, at two seasons of the year; once about the time they have their fawns, for the purpose, it is supposed, of avoiding the retired haunts of the wolves; and again as before stated, to shelter themselves from the inclemencies of the weather. They are found, indeed, at this place from September until about the last of February; or, in other words, at all times when they are, properly speaking, game—excepting only when the bucks are good and the does unfit for the table.
The method of killing them is as follows, viz:—A party of three or four, (or oftentimes one person alone, with or without a dog,) accompanied by a slow, well trained hound or two, approach the ground selected for the hunt, separating as they come to it, to the distance of from thirty to one hundred yards, as the nature of the ground dictates, and then move forward abreast of each other, watching for the first bound or jump of the deer, which is more frequently within the distance of fifty yards than otherwise. Should the deer jump up within shot, the person nearest to him fires. If he fail in bringing him down, the remainder of the party (the dog let loose) immediately give chase; some directly after him, and others with the intention of cutting him off from his favorite thicket, towards which, with a singular pertinacity and stubbornness, he directs and continues his course. Indeed, I have often seen them run side and side, with one or two of the party, for a half mile; and in spite of the exertions of the pursuer, enter the copse at a distance of no more than fifteen feet from the disappointed horsemen, whose guns have probably missed fire or been unsuccessfully discharged. Timid as they are by nature, this has been discovered a strong trait in their character:—they will, by a long continued and desperate effort, endeavor to run to a favorite thicket or pond. If the deer gain a thicket, it is surrounded as soon as possible, and the dog seldom fails to bring him out near the "stand" of some one of the party. This, however, dwindles down to the old system of "stand killing"—a kind of sport little to be compared to the one I have here described; more particularly, when the deer is missed by the first who fires. In that case, the excitement is intense—horsemen and deer are at their topmost speed in an instant—the country is level—the riding beautiful—the acts and objects of one visible to all—forming, including the scenery, a tout ensemble unequalled in all the annals of deer killing. It is true, the scene does not continue long—generally about half an hour; but it is so often repeated, with a variation sufficiently important only to create a pleasing variety, that it imparts a charm decidedly preferable to the long chase, and perhaps not the less so that the intervals between the "bouncing," (so it is ycleped) allow rest and breath to the horse enabling him to go fresh into every new chace."

SIR ARCHY.
This famous horse has cleared for his proprietor, (independent of his achievements on the turf) $70,000. He is still living, but in the extremity of old age, (in his 30th or 31st year.) His vigor is extinct. He has not shed his hair for several years, and it has grown to the length of two or three inches. A gentleman, who has lately seen him, says, that of all animals he is the worst looking, and would be the last taken for the most celebrated horse of the age. His owner treats him with all possible kindness, as it would be unpardonable indeed if he did not. Provender, without stint, at rack and manger, and a soft and delicate bed, proclaim the proprietor's gratitude. The door is left open to allow his egress and ingress at pleasure, but it is observed that Archy only comes out to drink, and having done so, immediately returns to his stable.
Except those of the finny tribe, it is conjectured that Sir Archy's posterity out-numbers that of any living animal.

A BOY LOST.
Thomas B. Wait Badger, (son of B. Badger, formerly Editor of the Christian Advocate and Journal, and more recently of the New York Weekly Messenger,) left his parental home, on Monday morning, 10th inst. under circumstances peculiarly painful, and has not yet been found. He was a bright intelligent lad, in the 14th year of his age; rather full face, fair skin and large black eyes; the nail on the fore finger of the right hand had been torn nearly off by an accident, and has not yet grown out. He was dressed in a dark mixed broad cloth roundabout, new cloth pantaloons, thinner and lighter mixed than the roundabout; new light figured vest; blue mixed yarn stockings, and shoes that had been half soled and heeled. He left home without hat or cap, but may have obtained one since. Any person who shall return the lad to his parents, No. 15 King street, New York, or inform them where he may be found, shall be rewarded for the trouble and expense which they may incur in such a deed of mercy and benevolence.
☞ Editors and Printers who publish this notice, will confer a favor that will be duly appreciated, by an afflicted brother of the craft—June 26th, 1833.

Clough the Murderer.—The notorious Joel Clough, under sentence of execution for the murder of Mrs. Hamilton, at Bordentown, N. J. was on the 21st inst. discovered in the endeavor to break jail at Mount Holly. He had possessed himself of a sharp stone, with which he had succeeded in making a hole entirely through the wall, so that light could be seen in the aperture. In a short time he would have created a space large enough for egress.

New-York TRAVELLER, TIMES & JOURNAL.

PIGEON SHOOTING.
A match between Mr. Lucas of Philadelphia, and Mr. James Bache of New York took place at the Red House, near Harlem, on Tuesday last. The best out of fifteen birds;—to fire alternately 2 shots each. The result proved it to be rather a soft match, though the shooting of the winner was by no means equal to many of his former efforts. Mr. Bache brought down his first four birds,—missed the fifth, but killed the next two: failed in the eighth and ninth, but succeeded in the two following shots—missed the next, but brought down his birds on the 13th and 14th,—thus succeeding in ten out of fourteen,—and as Mr. Lucas had taken 11 shots and only brought down his birds in the first four and the 8th (missing 6 out of 11,) it was not, of course, possible for him to win, and Mr. Bache consequently took the stakes. This match excited much interest, as a trial of skill between the Gunners of New York and Philadelphia, though very little betting took place on the occasion. There were plenty of pigeons on the ground to be shot, but none to be plucked.

On the 4th of July, an elegant Buggy will be trotted for over the Course at the Harlem Trotting Park. Free for any horse that never won a purse. To trot under saddle carrying 145 lbs—two miles and repeat—and to start at 3 o'clock. Immediately after the above, a first rate young horse who can trot his mile within three minutes and a half, will be sold by auction.

SIR ARCHIE AND HIS SON CHARLES.
A friend from old Point Comfort writes us word under date of the 21st inst. "There is a report here this morning, that the celebrated Sir Archie, the sire of Sir Charles, died on the same day as the latter—the 7th inst. Within a month, Virginia has lost the most extraordinary man, and two of the finest horses that ever lived."

THE STUD BOOK.
This valuable and elaborate Work on which so much time and expense have been bestowed, is now in the hands of the printer, and will very shortly be presented to the Sporting World. An authentic "Stud Book" has long been wanting, and the unwearied industry with which Mr. Edgar has pursued his object for five and twenty years in seeking correct information of the pedigrees of all thorough bred horses in this country, affords the strongest presumption that this desideratum will be supplied.
Mr. Edgar, the proprietor of the Work, has not only occupied this length of years in searching for the true genealogy of all our Racers, but has travelled over 50,000 miles during that time in this one pursuit, at an enormous expenditure, to enable him to perfect his Work. When it is issued, we have no doubt the Sporting World will find he has completed his intention, as he has had opportunities and facilities afforded him which perhaps no other could procure.
The Work will be published in 2 volumes, and commence with the pedigrees of all the imported Horses from the year 1733 to the present day.—Firstly the English and Irish Horses. Secondly the Arabians,—thirdly the Barbs, and fourthly, the Spanish Horses. In the next, or fifth part, will be contained all thorough bred American Horses with their names and pedigrees complete. The whole alphabetically arranged, and of simple and easy reference. We have been favored with the M. S. for a short time, and augur most favorably of the work from the clearness and simplicity of all its arrangements.
The printing is confided to Mr. Henry Mason, of Maiden Lane, and his deserved reputation is a guarantee that it will be got up in first rate style.
The untiring zeal and industry which Mr. Edgar has displayed in this, entitle him to a liberal and early reward,—and we sincerely hope we shall soon have to record a demand equal to the merits of the work.

POETRY.
It has been said, but as we contend and are prepared to show, most wrongfully, that there is a deficiency of poetic genius on this side of the Atlantic; that the true afflatus cannot rise from the midst of our mountains, and lakes, and valleys. Now we take it that the capacity of a people for poesy is to be determined by the quantity and quality of the metre that is perpetrated annually, monthly, weekly or daily among them, and not as some would suppose, by the number or taste of the readers. These latter cannot readily be ascertained; they are vague, intangible, and indefinite—But the former materials for a judgment are certain and palpable, and the conclusions to be drawn from them are readily made apparent by the simplest process of calculation. For example; it is not a difficult matter to ascertain the number of newspapers and magazines that are published in the United States; and it may be assumed that in each of these a given number of original lines appears every day, or week, or month as the case may be; from these data the quantity may be got at with sufficient accuracy, making allowance for the daily papers in this city which are for the most part too full of politics to present their fair share of poetry; although it will not perhaps be required to make any deduction, even for them, when we remember the acres of rhyme that are written but never published. The next question then is as to quality; and here we feel ourselves upon firm ground—It is in fact almost incredible what choice morsels of inspiration are springing up daily around us, shedding their fragrance for a little time, and then quietly subsiding into oblivion. We could expatiate upon this topic at great length did time and the state of our columns permit; but the length to which these remarks have already extended, recalls to our mind the importance of brevity. The subject of this article was suggested by the accidental discovery of an exquisite little gem in the poetical line, which we dug out a few days ago from the somewhat brief columns of a modest cotemporary that once a week gladdens the eyes and the hearts of our brethren out in the west. This remarkable effusion is altogether too choice not to be
